Beef 201 Teaches Production From Beginning To End

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — In today's vertically-integrated business world, those in the agriculture industry are quickly learning the value of knowing the start-to-finish, farm-to-table production process.

The "Beef 201"' course hosted by the Pennsylvania Beef Council and Penn State University's department of dairy and animal science gave industry representatives the chance to learn about the beef production process from visual evaluation to carcass breakdown.

Course Overview

Approximately 20 participants first learned about determining value of live cattle from Dr. Keith Bryan, Penn State professor. In addition they studied the mechanics of calculating value, besides visually and ultrasonically evaluating cattle. Dr. Bill Mies, Texas A & M University, was the keynote speaker of the evening.

The second day classes covered not only Beef Quality Assurance but also slaughter observation and evaluation. Dr. William Henning and the Penn State Meats Lab staff covered carcass inspection, beef grading, and a beef carcass breakdown demonstration. Beef 201 students then tried their hand at cutting wholesale cuts in the afternoon.

During day three of the course Dr. Henning led the review and grading of the carcasses, followed by Dr. Harold Harpster, who taught about nutrition and growth factors and their relevance to carcass quality.

Dr. Erskine Cash presented about the relevance and use of EPDs and Dr. John Comerford spoke on marketing challenges and opportunities. Mike Miller, from Cattle-Fax, gave a 5-year outlook for the beef industry. Gene Gagliardi, designer of several visionary food items, gave a cutting demonstration which was followed by a producer panel discussion.

Quality Audit Results

Deb Roeber, graduate research assistant at Colorado State University, presented "Improving the Value of Cattle in the Beef Industry."

According to Roeber, the final steps of revision are now fine tuning the executive summary of NCBA's 2000 quality audit. The audit, a collaborative effort of four universities, began surveying 30 meat processing plants in May last year. The study is the sequel to the 1991 and 1995 audits and includes survey responses from 3,500 industry representatives.

Roeber highlighted the results of the national market cow and bull beef audit. The evaluations took place in packing plants in

Cow Business 'Mostly About People'

ANDY ANDREWS

WEST MIDDLESEX (Mercer Co.) — National Holstein Association President James N. "Bud" Leckie told about 200 Pennsylvania Holstein Association (PHA) members Wednesday evening that they're all in a "cows/people" business.

"You can have the cows, but if you don't have the right kind of people, you don't have anything," he said.

Those words were clarified even further by Duane Hershey, who with wife Marilyn was presented with the PHA Distinguished Young Breeder Award at the annual convention banquet at the Radisson Hotel in West Middlesex.

Duane said, "You can call it cows and people, but it's mostly about people. Cows come and go. But the relationships we build in the Holstein breed are what we appreciate the most."

Dean Johnson, PHA president, told the banquet members that Hershey's Ar-Joy Farm, Cochranville, includes Duane and Marilyn with their four children, Steve, Kelby, Robert, and Kacie. The dairy has 100 registered cows and the Hersheys farm 140 acres at home, along with 360 acres of rented ground.

Newswanger Retires, Andrews Named Editor

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) - Lancaster Farming's Editor Everett R. Newswanger has announced that he will retire at the end of February. The current issue is the last one that will be published under his direction.

A longtime friend of the ag industry and a strong advocate of the production side of farming, Newswanger began his career as a farmer for 10 years south of Kinzers in Lancaster County. During that time, he put together a small herd of registered Holsteins with limited capital that ranked fourth in the local DHIA one year and had several individual records that were first in the county. During this time he served as president, vice president, and news reporter for the Lancaster County Holstein Assn. And he was the news reporter for the Lancaster County Poultry Association.

His work with Lancaster Farming began as a staff reporter prior to the dispersal of his dairy herd in the late '60's. Later as editor, he became known for the wide range of commodity, specie, and area coverage of farm news found in each issue. Under Newswanger's direction, the "real

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Andy Andrews, 11-year member of the Lancaster Farming staff, has been promoted to managing editor, announced Bill Burgess, general manager of Lancaster County Weeklies.

Andrews assumes the duties of Everett Newswanger, who is retiring.

Andrews joined Lancaster Farming in January 1990 and brings two decades of writing and editing experience from several industries.

In 1992, Andrews was awarded the PennAg Industries outstanding ag business journalist honor. A year later, Andrews won second place in the statewide Keystone Award contest for a series on water quality. In 1995, Andrews won an honorable mention from the Keystone Awards program for a series on sinkhole protection.

In 1982, Andrews earned a bachelor's degree in journalism from Temple University. He has worked as assistant editor for Chilton Company's Electronic Component News and as associate editor for Chilton's Automotive Industries. Andrews was publisher and editor of his own computer magazine, Entry (formerly Philadelphia Computer).

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

FEB. 26–MAR 4, 2001

A DAY WITH THREE NAMES

Whether you call it Pancake Day, Mardi Gras or Shrove Tuesday, it's all the same. Falling immediately before Ash Wednesday, Shrove Tuesday is the final day before Lent, when cooking fats will be forbidden. The custom of "shriving" is the process of purification by confessing one's sins. Pancakes are among the traditional foods eaten before the fasting period. The Pennsylvania Dutch celebrate with "fastnacht kuchen," a rectangular doughnut with a slit in the middle, traditionally made without yeast. In parts of England, the bells that call churchgoers to the Shrove Tuesday service are called the pancake bells.

But hark, I hear the pancake bell
And fritters make a gallant smell.

–Poor Richard's Almanac 1684

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Save your children's letters and artwork in a portfolio case or stationery box. They can decorate it however they choose.

CHOCOLATE WAFFLES

2 cups cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
3 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1-1/4 cups milk
1/3 cup butter, melted
2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
2 eggs, separated and beaten whipped cream, for topping

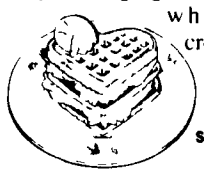
Preheat waffle iron. Mix dry ingredients, then add wet items in the order listed, beating well after each, except for the beaten egg whites which should be gently folded in to the batter. Fill griddle ⅔ full and bake until steam stops emerging. Top with whipped cream.



Makes 6 to 8 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

When the sun is shining on Shrovetide Day, it bodes well for the rye and the peas.

Thunder on Shrove Tuesday foretelleth wind.

OPINION

Thanks For Your Help

The time has come to retire. And so this will be the last editorial and issue of Lancaster Farming under the direction of Everett R. Newswanger. The journey has been interesting with many changes to be seen over the last 40 years. From milk production records to crop yields the increase is incredible. While many things have increased the number of farmers and the number of agribusinesses that serve them have decreased. Yet technology and the dedication of the younger generation promises hope for a continued strong agriculture in this region.

So here's a toast to agriculture. I'll not miss the deadlines each week. But I will miss the wonderful people who make up the fraternity of agriculture. Thanks for all you have done to help me make Lancaster Farming the premier farm newspaper on the planet. -Everett

Now Is The Time

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Sign Up For Dairy Payments

United States Department of Agriculture just announced the sign up period for Dairy Market Loss Assistance (DMLA) III is from February 26, 2001 to March 30, 2001. This program is designed to pay dairy farmers for loss income due to changes in the country's milk pricing system. Eligible farmers will be paid $0.6468 per hundredweight (cwt) up to 39,000 cwt. (maximum of $25,225.20 per farmer).

Eligible farmers are those who were paid less than 12 months' base production under DMLA-I and II, were new producers for calendar year 2000 or for dairy producers that were eligible for DMLA-I and II and never signed up for payments. Farmers need to file application for this program in the county where the dairy operation is located.

All applications must be submitted to the applicable county Farm Service Agency (FSA) office by close of business on March 30, 2001. Applications received or requested after March 30, 2001 will not be approved, including FAXed or mailed applications. For more detailed information contact your county FSA office.

To Look At Phosphorus Levels In Feed

Feeding phosphorus at excessive levels increases feed costs and contributes to excess buildup of phosphorus in the soil, reports Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County extension dairy agent.

Currently, application rates of manure are determined by soil nitrogen loading rates. In the future, application rates will likely be governed by phosphorous levels. The National Research Council (NRC) has released new guidelines for feeding phosphorous. Now many dairy farmers are feeding their cows more phosphorous than they need.

Lowering the dietary phosphorous level in the feed reduced the phosphorous excreted and feed costs without adversely affecting milk production or reproduction. In the past, the level and availability of phosphorus in feed stuffs was not well determined. Recent research indicates that phosphorous in many feedstuffs is more available than originally thought.

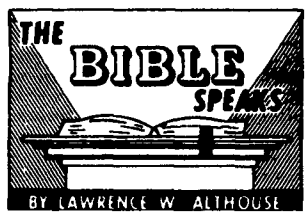
On many farms and for many cows the forage portion of the ration may supply all the phosphorous the cows need with no need for supplemental phosphorous. Consult your nutritionist for advice on fine tuning the phosphorous levels of your ration. This will help reduce costs while helping the environment.

To Welcome New Columnist

Starting next week Leon Ressler, Lancaster County's new extension director, will assume the responsibility for writing this column as I begin my new assignment as York County extension director on March 1st. Leon brings a wealth of agricultural knowledge and experience that I am sure you will enjoy. It has been a pleasure writing this column for the past nine plus years.

I have enjoyed the many comments you have shared with me. It is very rewarding to hear how this column has helped you better manage your farms, prevent disasters and stimulate thinking. As I assume my responsibilities in York County, I look forward to my continued working relationship with the agricultural community. Now is the time to say thank you for the opportunity to share my thoughts and agricultural information with you.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "A positive attitude causes a chain reaction of positive thoughts, events and outcomes that creates extraordinary results."



BEYOND THE UPPER ROOM

Background Scripture:
Luke 24:13-49.
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 28:16-20.

We do not know just where in Jerusalem the rest of the disciples of Jesus were when two of them came hurrying back to tell of their remarkable experience of the Risen Lord on the Emmaus Road.

Many interpreters think that it was the same Upper Room in which Jesus and his disciples had shared his Last Supper. Although there is no evidence for it, for the writer's convenience I make that tentative assumption.

In Luke, as in the other three gospels, it is impossible to pin down just exactly the nature of the Risen Lord whom the disciples experienced. On the Emmaus road, the two disciples of Jesus did not recognize him until he sat at table with them and broke bread. As they were retelling their experience to those in Jerusalem, "Jesus himself stood among them."

And how did the disciples react to the sudden appearance of the Risen Christ? "But they were startled and frightened, and supposed that they saw a spirit" (24:37).

This would lead us to believe that the Jesus they experienced in the Upper Room and the Emmaus road was not exactly the same physical presence with whom they had shared the past several years. But then Luke startles us again by quoting Jesus: "See my hands and my feet, that it is I myself; handle me and see; for a spirit has not flesh and bones as you see that I have" (39). And if we add in Mary Magdalene's experience in John 20:17 — "Do not hold me, for I have not yet ascended to the Father . . ." — we have good reason to be thoroughly confused about the Resurrected Lord.

"If He Rose At All . . .'

This confusion has led some people to believe that the disciples did not actually "see" and "hear" the Risen Jesus, but "saw" him as an apparition or simply "felt" or "remembered" the illusion of his presence. It is a good piece of rationalization, but that is not what any of the four gospel accounts are telling us.

The two on the Emmaus road may not have recognized Jesus, but neither did they think they were walking and dining with an apparition. Although some of the disciples in the Upper Room may have thought that what they "saw" and "heard" was an immaterial spirit, the Jesus they encountered there encouraged them to touch his material hands and feet and ate some boiled fish with them.

In a poem, "Seven Stanzas At Easter" John Updike, in John Updike — Verse, Crest Books, Fawcett Publications, 1965, writes:

Make no mistake; if He rose at all
it was as His body;
if the cells' dissolution did not reverse,
the molecules reknit,
the amino acids rekindle,
the Church will fall.

If we reduce the resurrection of Jesus to the strong recollection of a leader lately departed, "the Church will fall," for the Good News of Jesus Christ would amount to nothing more than an encouraging obituary. Jesus was powerfully present at the resurrection, although neither I nor anyone else can explain how it happened.

So, although the gospel witnesses cannot really explain what happened when they encountered the Risen Lord, they wanted us to know that his presence was a powerful one. He was the same Jesus with whom they had walked the roads of Galilee, but he was also a different Jesus, too — and that is about the best we can do with their experiences as they have shared them with us.

We can better chronicle ("better," although not adequately) what happened as a result of those resurrection experiences. It was God's plan, said the Risen Lord, "that repentance and forgiveness of sins should be preached in his name to all nations, beginning from Jerusalem. You are witnesses of these things" (47,48). The stories of encounters with the Risen Lord were not to be kept as secrets to be told within the confines of the Upper Room. The power of the resurrection must be taken out of the Upper Room and into the world.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

By Ken Bailey
Penn State University
February 19, 2001

January Milk Production Down 1.5 Percent

-Anticipated milk supply to tighten

-Cheese production expected to be reduced

-Current cheese prices react

On February 16 USDA released the January milk production report. December revised milk production for 2000 for 20 select states was 11 9 billion pounds, down 0 7 percent from December 1999 January 2001 milk production for 20 select states was 12 1 billion pounds, down 1 5 percent from January 2000

The perceived reduction in the milk supply, coupled with firm demand for process cheese, strengthened cheese prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange Prices for 40-pound blocks rose from $1 16 per pound on Monday, February 12 to $1 28 by Friday, February 16 Barrel prices rose from $1.20 per pound on Monday to $1 25 by Friday

USDA reported last week that demand for process cheese was strong due to buyers storing for later use and fast food promotions Recent price increases also stimulated natural cheese sales and reduced spot load availability

What is driving this market is a perception that the milk supply is tightening Recent electrical problems in California, profit problems in the West, and the recent milk production report are cited as reasons for this strong reaction

January milk production for 20 select states did fall 1 5 percent relative to January 2000 And, the number of cows on farms in January did fall 12,000 head relative to December 2000 (this is only the second month in a few years that cow numbers fell) But milk production last January (2000) was up whopping 5 percent relative to January 1999 So the base year we are comparing January 2001 to is relatively high Stated another way, January 2001 milk production for 20 select states was up 3 4 percent relative to January 1999, an average increase of 1 7 percent per year

The big news of course is that California milk production was up only 1 5 percent in January Cow numbers rose from 1 492 million head in January 2000 to 1 562 million head in January 2001 Production per cow fell Will this negative trend last a few more months for the number one dairy state? Arizona production fell 4 9 percent, again due to lower production per cow There were big production losses in other states as well Missouri down 12 8 percent, Texas down 12 1 percent, and Virginia down 5 8 percent

FUTURES MARKETS

Of course the big growth states continued to grow Idaho was up 7 3 percent in January, Indiana was up 8 2 percent, and New Mexico was up 3 8 percent

The dairy futures markets are reflecting this fear in the milk supply On Friday, February 16, the Class III futures prices showed prices peaking at $12 30 per cwt for August – October 2001 These are very good prices for those interested in locking in milk prices And, the Class IV futures prices settled at $13 40-$13 50 per cwt for August – October 2001 Again, excellent prices

My forecast for class prices under federal orders is presented in Table 3 below Note the Class III annual average price forecast for 2001 is $11 02 per cwt up $1 28 relative to 2000 And, the annual average Class IV price forecast for 2001 is $12 86 up $1 03 per cwt from 2000 Again, these are very healthy milk prices

For more information regarding milk markets, see my website at www aers psu.edu/dairyoutlook/

Program Stresses Importance of Quality Pork Products

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Consumer demand for high quality, consistent, wholesome products is beginning to drive the pork industry. Creating just a lean product is not good enough any more, said Steve Moeller, Ohio State University Extension swine specialist.

"If producers want to fit into a value-added, niche market, they need quality," Moeller said. "People need a basic understanding of what goes on from the production level through the consumer level that influences quality as it relates to demand for product."

To help further the understanding of the changing pork industry, Ohio State University and pork industry collaborators are sponsoring Pork 509: Meeting the Need for High Quality, Consistent Pork Products in Ohio, April 4-5 in the Animal Sciences Building on Ohio State University's Columbus campus.

The two-day program targets pork producers and people with an influence on the production of high quality pork. It is an opportunity for people to understand quality factors beyond lean meat, Moeller said.

Pork 509 will address production at the farm, packing-plant and retail levels.

The objectives of the program are:

To improve the competitive position of Ohio pork producers through the marketing of high quality, consistent, wholesome pork products.

To explain carcass merit buying systems and factors influencing the price received for market hogs.

To provide an overview of pork muscle quality attributes affecting processing capability and consumer acceptability of pork, and discuss the management, environmental, nutritional and genetic factors that contribute to muscle quality deficiencies.

To provide an open forum where representatives of varied pork industry segments can discuss current and future issues that contribute to the quality, consistency and wholesomeness of pork.

To teach, through hands-on training, the differences in price and value at the farm, packing plant and retail levels.

Topics to be covered on April 4 are live animal evaluation, ultrasound evaluation and demonstration, grid pricing, pork slaughter procedures, meat inspection, pork carcass fabrication, taste panel evaluation, and quality and the consumer. Areas scheduled for April 5 are factors influencing muscle quality, measuring pork muscle quality, determining lean growth, microbiology and food safety, targeting the consumer, and processing strategies.

"Participants completing Pork 509 will have a better understanding of the numerous links in the pork chain between the producer and the consumer, and how the interaction of these links leads to profitability and competitiveness in the swine industry," Moeller said. "They will have the background and educational resources needed to make informed decisions, and the tools to help develop and share information among their peer groups."

A maximum of 30 people can sign up for the course. Spaces are available on a first-come, first-served basis. Registration for Pork 509 is $60 per participant and covers all meals, materials and parking arrangements. Registration is required by March 21. The program was originally scheduled for Dec. 4-5, 2000, but was postponed.

For registration or additional information about Pork 509, contact Pat Rigby, Moeller or Henry Zerby through Ohio State University's Ohio Pork Industry Center at (800) 398-7675.

THE LEADER IN THE FIELD

Cow Business 'Mostly About People'

John Cope, with wife Helen, was presented with the 2001 Pennsylvania Holstein Hall of Fame Award during the annual PHA banquet in West Middlesex.

Rolling herd average is 24,000 pounds milk, 879 pounds fat, 740 pounds protein, and a BAA of 105.1.

According to Johnson, in 1986 Duane and Marilyn started a partnership with Duane's parents Art and Joyce. By 1991, three quarters of the herd was in partnership. That year, Duane and Marilyn bought out Art and Joyce's share.

Duane and Marilyn are expanding the herd. When completed, the Hersheys will be milking 350 head of Holsteins in a new double-12 parlor.

The Hersheys, active in a variety of community services, have received numerous honors, including the Pennsylvania Master Farmer Award and the Octorara Hall of Fame Award.

Marilyn has a weekly column on the Internet at crosswalk.com. She also had a book published, "Oncology, Stupology: I Want To Go Home," which appeared in 1999 from Butterfly Press, written from the Hersheys' personal experience when their son Robert was diagnosed with leukemia. Duane thanked the members of the PHA for their kindness during that difficult time.

Duane, seated, and Marilyn Hershey were honored Wednesday evening with the PHA 2001 Distinguished Young Breeder Award at the state banquet.

Duane and Marilyn also created the "Calf With A Cause" fund.

According to Johnson, the Hersheys also have enjoyed success in merchandising. "A notable individual in their barn is Rothrock Aero Luelle," Johnson said. "She was bought in partnership with Duane's brother, Brad. Luelle proved to be a sound investment and filled numerous bull and embryo contracts."

The Ar-Joy farms have been successful in obtaining bull contracts and are actively marketing cattle, including bulls to AI as well as embryos internationally.

Duane told everyone at the banquet, "Try to stay on the positive side."

Douglas Seipt, chair of the award committee, honored John D. and Helen Cope, Mechanicsburg, with the 2001 Pennsylvania Holstein Hall of Fame Award.

Seipt spoke of the many ways in which Cope deserved an award that honors someone "who has served many leadership roles on local, state, and national levels," Seipt said.

Cope was born on a livestock farm in Lancaster. Cope has a brother Sam and a sister Marty. John was graduated from East Hempfield High School and enrolled at Penn State. At Penn State, Cope was a member of Alpha Zeta Fraternity and gained an interest in the dairy industry. Cope was graduated with a degree in ag economics with emphasis in farm management in 1952.

From college, Cope began work at Ashcombe Farms in Cumberland County. The main farm, said Seipt, was developed from three tenant farms consisting of more than 400 acres. A herd of registered Holsteins was established.

In the early 1960s at Ashcombe, a milk jugging operation was started. A few years later, a second herd and jugging facility opened in Dover. Between the two farms were 1,000 head of Holsteins, 70 percent registered. Both herds were among the highest in production in Pennsylvania for herds with more than 200 cows.

Breeding and commercial cattle carrying the Ashcombe prefix were exported to 10 foreign countries, noted Seipt. Cope also managed the cropping of 1,300 acres of corn, wheat, and hay. Cope became vice president and general manager of Ashcombe Farms in the 45 years at the enterprise.

John and Helen have three sons — Doug, David, and Dennis, and a daughter, Amy. John and Helen also have five grandchildren.

In 1976, John and Helen purchased their own farm in Cumberland County. In the early 1980s they formed a partnership with their son, Doug, and his wife, Joanne. They used the Four-Co prefix for their herd of 50 registered Holsteins.

In September 1990, the main farm buildings were lost to fire. Instead of rebuilding, the partnership decided to sell the milking herd and raise the surviving heifers. Today they raise heifers for some of the local dairy producers.

Cope's contributions to community, past and present, are numerous, Seipt said. Cope has served as Cumberland County's state director on the Holstein association. Cope was elected treasurer of the PHA in 1972. In 1978, he was elected vice president and, in 1980, president of the state association. During his tenure as president, state membership grew to more than 6,000 members, the largest U.S. state membership.

In 1982, Cope, along with Wayne Beshore, co-chaired the state convention in Harrisburg.

According to Seipt, having served and completed all leadership positions in Pennsylvania, Cope was urged to run for national director. He was elected in 1984 and re-elected in 1988. On the national board, Cope served five years on the executive com-

The Pennsylvania Holstein Association recognized their membership solicitors at their Awards Program held at their Annual Convention at the Radisson, West Middlesex

The efforts of all the membership solicitors around the state is tremendous A lot of time was put forth and all solicitors put in effort, but special recognition goes to these individuals who has done outstanding work in membership solicitation.

James Houser, Centre County
Mark Bachman, Potter County
Keith Decker, Clarion/Venango County
William DeHart, Butler County
Connie Troutman, Berks County

There is one club that has already reached their membership goal for 2001, Centre County will receive a $200 cash award for their efforts.

All membership solicitors are congratulated on a job well done. Holstein breeders are reminded that member's applications are still being accepted for the 2001 mittee and five years on the finance committee, which he also chaired.

In 1993, Cope was elected vice president of the national board. In 1995, at the national convention in Pittsburgh, the delegates elevated Cope to president. Cope was the chairman for the Pittsburgh National Convention. Seipt said Cope became "the third Pennsylvanian in the last 50 years to be elected national Holstein president."

Said Seipt, Cope's "fairness and unbiased nature has served him well in his many leadership roles."

Cope told those at the banquet, "I consider you all hall-of-famer's, in every sense of the word."

Melinda Wolfe, state dairy princess from Milton and reigning SUN Area princess (the first from the SUN area to become state princess), spoke about the importance of youth to the future of agriculture.

The Williamsburg University student who is majoring in elementary education pointed out FFA Week and its importance in generating tomorrow's ag leaders.

Melinda said, "The rewards will come, whether now or 10 years from now," and about the importance of "hard work, dedication and determination."

More information from the conference, including comments from national Holstein president Bud Leckie, will be included in next week's Lancaster Farming.

1 Herd owner must be a member of both national and state associations, and enrolled in the Deluxe or Premier TriStar service options and Herd Classification programs

2 Percent B A A for Herd Classification conducted during the time period of September 1998 through February 2000 exceeding the national requirement of 104 2% If you classified more than once during this time period, both BAAs will be evaluated

3 Minimum of 20 87% RHA and higher cows in the milking herd of which at least 75% bear the herd owner's prefix.

— Spring Planting Review —

Successful Planting Requires Systems Approach, Attention To Detail

MOLINE, Ill. — You spend countless hours visiting field plots, talking with neighbors about the numbers they used last season, and poring over seed catalogs. You've made your decision and are confident you've picked the right seed for the spring.

But the process shouldn't end there. Experts say you should spend as much or more time analyzing the planting practices and systems you implement as you do on selecting the hybrids and varieties you plant.

Selecting The Right Planting System

The most obvious first step in putting together a planting plan may be to determine what planting system, and what equipment, is most appropriate for your operation. Factors such as tillage practices, cropping, and labor availability often influence equipment needs.

"Some growers may prefer to have one large piece of equipment they can use in various situations. But others — if they have the labor — may want to operate two separate seeding systems at once, planting corn and soybeans simultaneously," said Bill Barr, senior sales and service representative, row crop planters, John Deere Seeding Group.

"Not everyone wants — or needs — a 31-row planter," Barr said. "But everyone wants to maximize production. You have a specific number of acres and only so many days to get them planted. You choose whatever will get the job done."

Tillage practices also play a primary role in determining the right planting system. "If a grower changes from a conventional till system to a reduced tillage or even no-till system, for example, we generally can adapt the planter to meet additional needs for residue management," said Barr. "However, sometimes these changes require different seeding equipment."

Moving to a reduced tillage or no-till system offers two basic options for planting systems: (1) maintaining 30-inch row spacing for all crops, or (2) planting corn on 30-inch rows and adopting narrower spacing for soybeans. In either case, the planter requires upgrades to accommodate higher surface residue levels.

For example, a split-row planter may be necessary if you convert to narrow-row spacing. One split-row planter option is the John Deere 1780 12/23 split-row planter. It offers the capability to plant 12 30-inch rows, or 23 15-inch rows (more common in Midwestern operations where both corn and soybeans are planted).

Another option for soybeans and small grains is a drill. For example, the John Deere 1560 drill with 7.5-inch spacing works well for soybeans and small grains like wheat and barley. The new 1530 and 1535 drills are a hybrid type with drill boxes above the planter row units spaced at 15-inches.

Preplanting Service Ensures Good Planter Performance

Planting equipment should be thoroughly inspected and serviced to ensure proper performance in the field. Most maintenance steps involve a simple visual and mechanical inspection and don't take much time.

"You need to consider the planter as a whole system and conduct preplanting service inspections from the ground up," said Barr.

"Many people focus only on the seed meter and neglect other critical elements like the drive systems, and that can lead to frustration when you get in the field. It won't matter how well you've tuned the seed meter — your population and spacing will still be off if the drive system is not working properly," said Barr.

Barr recommends that growers review their service manuals and consult with their local dealer.

"All John Deere dealerships have a planter expert on staff. That person is trained to make sure the entire planter operates properly as a system. Consulting with your dealer saves time, aggravation, and money over the long run," he said.

Louie Vosberg, Calhoun County Implement, Manson, Iowa, agrees, and said, "Our technicians have been around the equipment and know what to look for. They know the spots that will wear first and have tools to set the planter to be the most accurate in specific conditions.

"We have mechanics that specialize in planters, not just someone off the street. Our mechanics deal specifically with John Deere planters, and attend regular training sessions to stay current on the equipment."

Vosberg said these lessons apply as much to older model planters as new models. "Many times new parts will fit old machines. It may be possible to upgrade an old machine and make it more efficient by simply adding some new components. Only a John Deere dealer would know about these opportunities," Vosberg said.

Seedbed Preparation Can Improve Planter Performance, Yield

Planters are designed to perform in a variety of soil and surface residue conditions by adding coulters, furrowers, or row cleaners, and by adjusting down-pressure. However, consistency in surface conditions, said Barr, helps to ensure the planter operates properly over the entire field

Seedbed preparation helps create a consistent field surface, which maximizes germination rates and, ultimately, yield. "The more consistent the surface conditions, the easier it is to set the planter and get the job done," said Barr.

Careful management of the soil profile also can create soil conditions that optimize seed-to-soil contact and maximize water and nutrient infiltration. This kind of soil management demands sophisticated tillage tools.

The John Deere 200 Seedbed Finisher prepares the soil surface for planting while reducing the amount of

10 Steps To Better Planter Performance

MOLINE, Ill. — Proper planting equipment maintenance is critical to ensure performance in the field.

Bill Barr, senior sales and service representative for row crop planters, John Deere Seeding Group, urges growers to review their service manuals, consult with their local dealer, and inspect their planter from the ground up working through these 10 simple steps:

1. Opener blades. Look for excessive wear. The openers should form a clear V-shape. Excessive wear will alter the opener spacing and change the shape and depth of the seed furrow. Adjust for wear by adding or removing shims as necessary.

2. Closing systems. Make sure the closing wheels are applying correct downforce. Check the wheel bearings for excessive wear and replace if necessary.

3. Seed tubes. Inspect the seed tube guards and guides, checking for proper alignment and excessive wear. Replace worn parts. Make sure the sensor is clear and the sensor wiring is intact. Use the brush provided by the manufacturer to clear seed tubes of debris.

4. Seed meters. Finger pickups include several moving parts, such as fingers, springs, backing plates, and brushes. Inspect and replace any worn or damaged parts. Vacuum seed meters generally require less maintenance than finger pickups, but you still need to inspect the seals and seed disk (and install the seed disk for your first crop). Check the flipper that engages the drive (on the back side of the meter) and repack with grease if necessary.

5. Planter drive systems. The planter utilizes several drive systems, including (1) the ground drive, (2) the seed meter drive, (3) seed transmission drive, and (4) chemical and fertilizer drive. Check all chains for wear and proper lubrication and tension — chains should be free and loose. Check sprockets and idler assemblies for excessive wear and proper alignment. Proper drive function is critical to maintaining proper seed spacing and population.

6. Hydraulics. Check for leaks in the hydraulic system by attaching the planter to your tractor and cycling the various hydraulic components, checking for proper movement and response time. If a leak is suspected, power down the system and release hydraulic pressure. Avoid contact with hoses — high-pressure oil injection can cause serious injury. Consult your dealer or service manual.

7. Tires. Proper drive performance requires a specific tire circumference. Low tire pressure can alter drive speed and seeding rates. Check tire pressure and inflate to the level specified in your service manual.

8. Attachments. Inspect attachments such as fertilizer and row cleaners for excessive wear and check for proper lubrication. Consult your service manual for specific checkpoints. For example, fertilizer attachments include pumps, nozzles, and strainers that may require service.

crusting, decreasing wind and water erosion, and preserving soil moisture.

"Research shows that yield increases when we have good soil adherence at the time of germination to help with moisture and nutrient uptake," said Matt Weinheimer, tillage marketing manager for John Deere. "The 200 Seedbed Finisher creates an optimum situation for increasing yield potential. It's a heavy-duty piece of equipment that helps growers create excellent growing conditions."

When used in conjunction with the John Deere 980 Field Cultivator, the 200 Seedbed Finisher creates a seedbed with larger soil particles on the surface and finer soil particles in the seed zone.

"Larger particles on the surface help disperse and reduce the energy of raindrops, which reduces erosion. And it helps moisture flow past the larger particles on top into the root zone below where plants can utilize it," Weinheimer said.

The staggered rolling baskets of the 200, combined with proper seed and weighting of the unit, break surface clods and level the soil profile. Spiraling rods are spaced to produce a soil texture that reduces crusting while firming the soil in the seed zone.

"The Seedbed Finisher creates a surface profile resistant to crusting, but also firms the soil to encourage seed-to-soil contact and preserve moisture levels in the top three-inches of the profile," said Weinheimer.

A double-truss tube provides added strength to the frame and generates downpressure to improve leveling and to keep baskets rolling at a consistent depth.

In the end, improving the soil profile and having your planter properly serviced at a John Deere dealership will ensure successful spring planting and allow you to take the first, critical step toward a bountiful fall harvest.

The John Deere 200 seedbed finisher creates a surface profile resistant to crusting while firming the soil to encourage seed-to-soil contact.

Precision Tools Mean Precision Management

MOLINE, Ill. — The challenges of the planting season often test the mettle of the most experienced growers. Precision farming tools such as parallel tracking, field documentation systems, and mapping software can help farmers and operators make sense of the madness.

Precision agriculture is a "suite of management strategies, technologies, and practices" farmers can use to improve decision-making in agricultural production, marketing, finance, and personnel management, said Kent Olson, Ph.D., Department of Applied Economics, University of Minnesota.

John Deere formed Agricultural Management Solutions (AMS) to meet the growing demand for precision farming management tools and resources. "Our goal is to develop agricultural solutions tailored to meet the customer's business goals," said Barry Schaffter, vice president of the AMS group for John Deere.

Parallel tracking uses a visual indicator with audible beeps to guide the operator down a straight path. "This tool will save the farmer time and money, especially when working with wider implements," said Terry Porter, marketing manager, John Deere AMS. "The operator can spend more time monitoring tractor performance."

The parallel tracking system from John Deere uses the StarFire™ position receiver and GPS signals to pinpoint a machine's location. Using the parallel tracking display, a simple icon shows the operator his or her exact position in the field relative to a straight path that is determined with the first pass.

Ultimately, said Porter, the goal of any precision agriculture system is to supply the producer with the right kind of information and the means to analyze and apply that information to make better — and more profitable — management decisions.

As an example, consider seed hybrid selection and purchasing. "You first need to collect real-time, site-specific information, like field conditions, tillage practices, seed varieties planted, and weather conditions," said Porter. He recommends the John Deere FieldDoc™ data collection system, which works in concert with Deere's StarFire receiver, GreenStar display, and on-board mobile data processor. "It allows you to make notes on the go, and it's geo-referenced, so the system tags data to a specific location in the field," Porter said.

To continue this scenario, producers then download data from FieldDoc to their desktop computer and use JDmap™ Deluxe software to analyze the information. According to Porter, JDMap translates raw field data into site-specific, multilayer maps and summaries that the producer uses to match seed variety performance to seed population rates, fertilizer and crop protection application rates, tillage practices, field drainage, soil types, or change application rates on-the-go based on-site-specific needs.

"One great feature of the software is that it allows operators to easily share electronic data files or reports with their crop consultants, and even upload the files and consult with suppliers and experts on-line," said Porter. JDmap works in tandem with the VantagePoint Network (www.vantagepoint.com), an online information system serving agriculture and the farming community.

The payoffs comes when the producer uses this information to determine exactly how many bags of each seed variety is needed, thus reducing overstocks and saving precious working capital and inventory costs.

9. Operator safety. Check road lighting systems to make sure they are working properly. Check that your SMV (slow moving vehicle) emblem is mounted properly and its reflective surface is clean.

10. Planter settings. As you complete the inspection and maintenance for each system on your planter, make your initial settings for the first crop, including the downforce setting on the row unit, depth of the row unit, and population rate.

Bumper Crop Begins With Seedbed

MOLINE, Ill. — Tillage helps soil dry sooner and more uniformly. This can get you started planting or seeding on schedule, especially in high-residue, poorly drained fields, or wet, late planting seasons.

Another advantage: You may be able to use longer-season seed varieties, harvest later, and let your crop dry in the field, not in the bin or with costly artificial drying.

Tillage can help reduce insect and plant disease problems. Your risk of insect damage increases as tillage decreases and more crop residue remains on the surface. The mixing action of tillage helps reduce the population of cutworms, slugs, stalk borers, and other pesky pests.

Tillage makes it easier for you to control soil fertility. You can move fertilizer, lime, and manure directly into the soil. And a properly equipped and set machine assures even, consistent distribution of this material, so your crop makes good use of what you've paid for and there's less loss. Incorporation also reduces volatilization and runoff of surface-applied commercial nitrogen and manure.

Tillage is a low-cost way to control weeds. Incorporating preplant herbicides with a tillage pass lets you use less crop protection products. With the even pattern you get with tillage, you gain more efficient and effective distribution. Plus, the tillage action kills many weeds and volunteer plants early, before your crop goes in.

Tillage is the most economical solution for soil compaction. It's especially effective in the top six- to 12-inches of soil. Even if you think you're avoiding compaction by eliminating all preplant tillage, compaction can still develop in some soils when you make trips over the field with combines, grain carts, trucks, tractors, fertilizer applicators, manure spreaders, and even livestock. A quick tillage trip can counter that type of compaction.

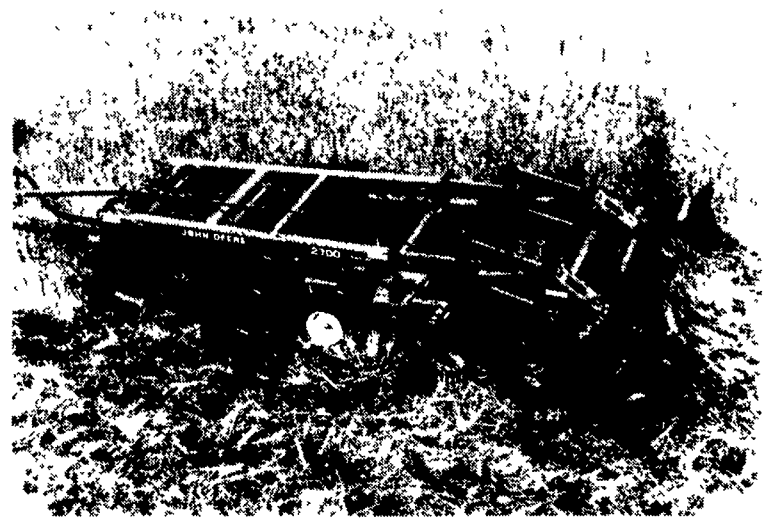
Tillage can benefit the environment. A rough, residue-covered field from fall tillage increases the ability of soil to absorb and save soil. It also resists wind erosion. Mixing fertilizer, manure, lime, and herbicides into residue-covered soil further reduces runoff.

First, consider your crops — fragile or nonfragile? Crops are one key to selecting the best seedbed tillage tool for your operation. What are the types and amounts of residue remaining from the previous crop? And how much of that surface residue do you want to retain after the tillage pass? Residue is classified as fragile or nonfragile, based on its size, density, amount produced, and ease of decomposition by weather.

Fragile residue crops include cotton, canola/rapeseed, dry beans/peas, lentils, mint, potatoes, peanuts, safflower, soybeans, sugarbeets, and vegetables.

Nonfragile residue crops include alfalfa, barley*, corn, flaxseed, oats*, rice, rye*, sorghum, sugarcane, tobacco, and wheat*.

*If the straw is cut into small pieces, as by a combine straw chopper.



The John Deere 2700 mulch ripper is equipped with TruPosition™ standards to create a more level surface and more precise control over residue management in fields.

At John Deere, it's how we look at things that sets us apart.

This advanced communications concept may someday very well be as common as a radio in John Deere tractors. Think about it. While the tractor is accurately steering and guiding itself down the field, you'll be able to check the weather, access markets, trade commodities, send-and-receive electronic files, analyze field data, and monitor machinery. And, providing you have time, catch a satellite broadcast of a live game or two. It's another example of how we are pioneering technology in the right directions to help make you more productive, more informed, more profitable than ever before. Yes, we look at things differently. Someday, you will too.

Beef 201 Teaches Production From Beginning To End

William Henning, Penn State professor, teaches food safety and beef value during the classroom phases of Beef 201.

13 states and also included face-to-face interviews.

In the marketing end, surveyors found that 44 percent of cow and bull beef products are sold as whole muscle cuts to lower-end steakhouses or airlines, making beef eating quality imperative.

"It's very important that we look at quality assurance aspects of not only fed cattle but also cows and bulls," said Roeber. She added that management practices would help producers recognize the maximum value of market cows and bulls.

"Be proactive to ensure the safety and integrity of the product by monitoring herd health to avoid quality defects," she said.

Culling animals earlier, handling them properly, eliminating or limiting branding and horns, and using modern genetics are steps to improving the quality of non-fed beef.

Surveyors also found that the quality assurance programs are having an impact on the condition of animals at the packing plant.

Frequency of condemned parts, said Roeber, has decreased since the '94 audit in all categories except tongue condemnation. The occurrence of cancer eye, hide defects, and bruises have decreased.

Since the audit in '94, surveyors found that 34 percent of dairy animals had injection-site lesions and 20 percent of beef animals had lesions.

"Producers are expected to act like owners of cattle instead of owners of machines," said Roeber.

According to the survey, 77.3 animals were polled or dehorned, 88.4 percent were free of major or critical bruises, and 93.5 percent graded USDA Select or better. The value loss because of defects and consequent discounts added up to $100.10. This figure reflects the 15.4 percent of the carcass value recaptured compared to the value lost in 1995.

Food Safety

In his presentation William Henning, Penn State professor, highlighted three aspects of food safety: preventing, removing, and eliminating contamination.

"The industry really has been working hard on the problem," said Henning. The food safety program is built on sanitation, said Henning.

In most of the major meat processing plants, the carcass is washed and rinsed with a mild organic acid immediately after hide removal to prohibit bacteria from adhering to the carcass. A steam pasteurization process, where the carcass is placed in a cabinet full of pressurized steam for six seconds, follows USDA inspection.

After the pasteurization, the carcass is given a cold water rinse and final organic acid rinse.

"The industry is held to a standard of zero tolerance for visible fecal contamination," said Henning.

The Hazard Analysis Critical Control Points, or HACCP approach is a science-based management system. According to Henning it is a process to ensure that all factors of making a safe product are in control at all times.

Beef Cattle Value

Since complete consistency remains in the future for the beef industry, value of the differing animal is determined by grade, finish, weight, sex, and even color.

Grade predicts value and thus determines price, said Henning. A quality grade is qualitative, predicting palatability, which includes tenderness, flavor, and juiciness. Tenderness may be affected by cooking or processing methods, but also by production methods.

Calcium-related enzymes, calpain and calpastatin, play a part in tenderness. The longer the cattle are fed a high-energy diet, the more calpain is produced, leading to a more tender product.

PASA's New Executive Director Introduced At 10th Annual Conference

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — More than 1,100 people attended the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture's (PASA's) 10th annual Farming for the Future Conference Feb. 9-10 here at the Penn Stater Hotel and Conference Center.

This year's conference featured the theme "Food is Our Commonwealth; Beyond Business as Usual;" an opening keynote address by Jim Hightower, an author, lecturer, radio commentator, "political sparkplug," and former Texas commissioner of agriculture; concurrent educational sessions on farming, business, sustainable meat marketing, biotech issues, season extension, organic grain, organic fruit production, composting, and much more; the annual PASA membership and committee meetings; the awards banquet; the sustainable agriculture trade show and marketplace; and closing keynote address by Winona LaDuke, director of the White Earth Land Recovery Project.

The organization's new executive director, Brian Snyder, was introduced at the conference opening. Snyder has a master's degree from Harvard Divinity School and a master's in business administration from the University of Massachusetts Amherst. He comes from the Gould Farm, a sustainable farm and mental health facility in Monterey, Mass. He replaces Tim Bowser, who resigned to take a position with the W.K. Kellogg Foundation "Fires of Hope" program that's designed to promote sustainable food systems across the U.S.

"I had for 10 years the best job in the world — and you paid me for this!" Tim said after accepting recognition at the awards banquet.

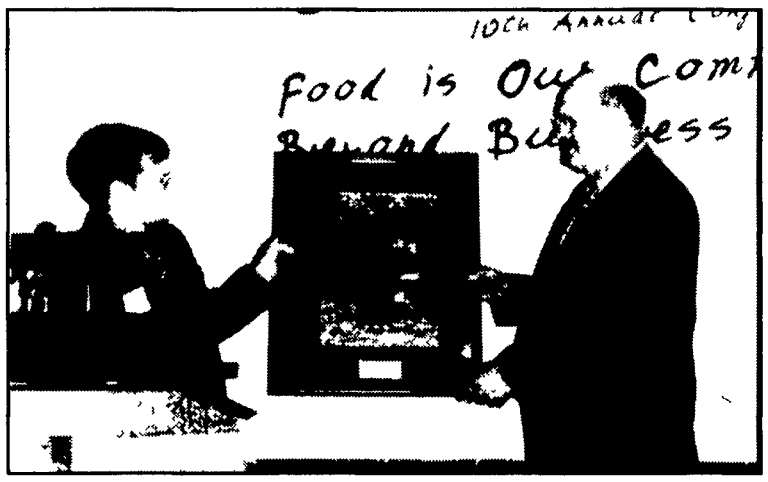
Steve and Sherry Groff of Cedar Meadow Farm in Lancaster County received the 2001 Outstanding Sustainable Leadership Award. The Groff family runs a 175-acre vegetable farm in southern Lancaster County and helps conduct PASA field days at their farm. Board member Lee Bentz also presented Groff with an award for his service as a board member.

Preston Boop of Union County also received recognition for his service on the board. Interim Director Lamonte Garber also presented Boop with a framed photograph for his years of service. Lee Bentz was recognized for his years of service and for serving as vice president of the organization.

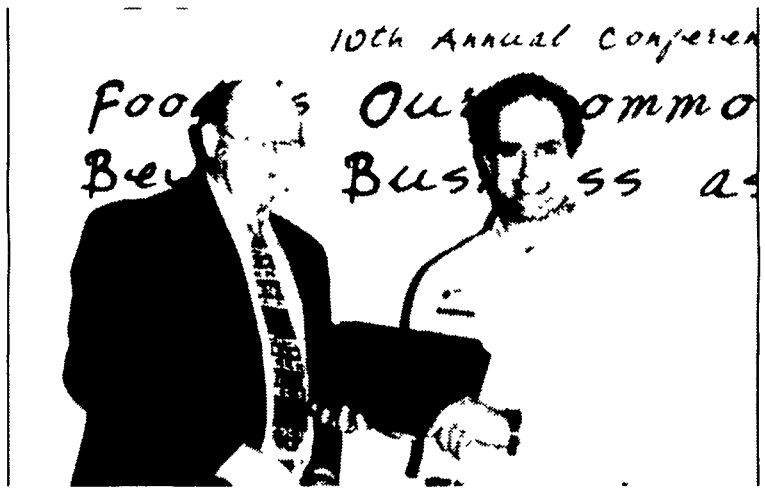
The newly elected board members include George DeVault of Pheasant Hill Farm in Lehigh County, Chris Fullerton of the Tuscarora Organic Growers Cooperative in Fulton County, Lyn Garling of the Pennsylvania IPM Program, Steve Moore of Sonnewald Farm in York County, and Kim Miller of Wolf Lake Farm in Westmoreland County.

PASA is a nonprofit organization whose members work to improve the economic and social prosperity of Pennsylvania food and agriculture. The organization offers statewide networks that link farmers, consumers, and markets.

PASA's inclusive approach to agriculture attracts as members (800 total) dairy producers, educators, bakers, cheesemakers, shopkeepers, herb growers, and many more.



PASA board member Lee Bentz, right, was recognized for serving as vice president and board member of the organization. Lamonte Garber, interim director, presented the award.



PASA's 2001 Outstanding Sustainable Leadership Award went to Steve Groff, right, of Lancaster County.

PASA board member Lee Bentz presents a service award to Steve Groff for his years of service on the PASA board.

The Expo is an excellent opportunity for PJCA members to exhibit their animals in a weekend of fun and education.

Since its creation in 1989, the Pennsylvania Beef Expo has expanded to include activities targeted at both Junior and Senior PCA members. This year's Expo begins with the PCA awards banquet and annual meeting, scheduled for Thursday, March 29 at Boalsburg Fire Hall, Boalsburg. Festivities will begin with a reception at 6 p.m. and dinner at 7 p.m. The association will recognize cattle producers with several awards including the Industry Service Award, Commercial Cattlemen, Seedstock Breeder and Cattle Feeder of the Year.

One farm will be recognized with the Stewardship Award for dedication to preserving agriculture and the environment for future generations. Other banquet highlights coronation of the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Queen and Princess. Banquet reservations can be made by calling the PCA office at (814) 238-5888.

TRADESHOW

March 30 will kick off the beginning of the Expo Trade Show. The three-day trade show is an excellent opportunity to visit and ask questions of equipment and pharmaceutical companies, as well as show supply, feed, and speciality exhibitors. Once again the trade show will also feature various displays of different beef breeds.

SKILLATHON AND QUIZ BOWL

Once again, this year's Pennsylvania Beef Expo will provide juniors with an opportunity to test their knowledge at the annual Beef Expo Skillathon and Beef Expo Quiz Bowl.

This year's Beef Skillathon will be held Saturday, March 31 from 8-10 a.m. at the Penn State Ag Arena, University Park. The Skillathon is an excellent opportunity for young beef enthusiasts to test their beef industry knowledge. By incorporating project skills and industry basics in a series of mini-learning stations participants compete in areas such as identification of beef breeds, retail cuts, feed ingredients and feed safety. Divisions for the Skillathon include senior (16-21), intermediate (12-15), and junior (8-11).

The Beef Expo Quiz Bowl will also take place on Saturday, March 31, beginning with preliminaries at 9 a.m. Any team of four PJCA, 4-H or FFA members is invited to compete. The competition will be divided into two divisions: 14- to 21-year-olds (seniors) and 8- to 13-year-olds (juniors). Primary Quiz Bowl topics will include nutrition, genetics, reproduction, animal health, marketing and promotion, and cattle breeds.

The Beef Skillathon and Quiz Bowl competitions are open to all PJCA, 4-H and FFA members. Individuals can join the PJCA for$5 annual membership fee at the contest site. Four-member PJCA county, club or school teams in any division also are invited to participate. For more information, contact Liz Smith at (717) 336-0553.

JUNIOR SHOWS

This year's Pennsylvania Beef Expo Heifer Show will be held Saturday March 31, at 2:30 p.m. and will sport more than seven different beef cattle breeds. All heifers born between October 1999 and October 2000 are eligible for the show. The junior steer show is scheduled on Sun., April 1, following the showmanship classes that begin at 8 a.m. Light, middle, and heavy weight division champions will compete for grand champion laurels.

Pa. BQA Program Announces Producer Certification Workshops

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania beef producers have the opportunity to receive beef quality assurance training and certification as part of the new Pennsylvania Beef Quality Assurance (BQA) Program, which is funded by the Pennsylvania Beef Council, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association.

One of the objectives of the program is to train, certify and recognize beef producers who adopt and maintain BQA guidelines and best management practices. Producers who complete a two-part training workshop will receive a certification manual detailing the BQA criteria and including helpful reference material and forms which can be copied to enhance good record-keeping.

Certified producers will also receive a certificate of completion, an attractive "Certified Producer" farm sign emblazoned with the program's blue and gold logo, and ear tags or back tags to identify their cattle as coming from the farm of a "Certified Producer."

To become certified, producers must agree to implement the checklist of BQA practices on their farms and submit to an on-farm evaluation every two years to keep their certification up-to-date. Training and evaluation are handled by extension and industry professionals whose purpose it is to assist producers.

With this program, Pennsylvania will join the ranks of 22 other states which already have recognized BQA certification programs in place.

Lancaster County cattle feeders participated in the first part of their training during Cattle Feeders Day on Jan. 30. The chute-side portion of their training will be announced when a date and location are confirmed.

Across the state, BQA training and certification workshops are currently being scheduled for March and April. Workshop dates and locations have been confirmed for the following areas:

• Washington and Westmoreland County area:

Wednesday, March 7 — 7 p.m. at Cedar Brook Golf Course, Belle Vernon.

• Armstrong and Indiana County area:

Thursday, March 8 — 7 p.m. at the Ford Cliff Fire Hall, Ford City.

• Mercer and Butler County area:

Wednesday, April 11 — 7:30 p.m. at the Mercer County extension office.

• More Training and Certification Workshops will be announced when confirmed for the following areas:

Chester County, York-Adams-Cumberland counties, Lebanon-Berks-Schuylkill counties, Bedford-Somerset counties, Centre County, Lycoming County, Wyoming County, and McKeon County.

Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association To Offer IVOMEC Scholarship

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association (PCA) has announced that it will make a $1,000 scholarship available to a young person planning a career related to the cattle industry. Funding for this scholarship is provided through PCA's participation in the IVOMEC. Generations Of Excellence™ program.

"Nothing is more important than providing a sound education for tomorrow's producers," according to Bill McCoy, president of PCA. "Those planning to work in the changing cattle industry into the next century will need to be proficient in animal and crop sciences, business economics, and communications. That's why PCA is providing a $1,000 IVOMEC Scholarship to help a deserving young cattleman or cattlewoman prepare for the future."

The PCA IVOMEC Scholarship will be awarded based on the applicant's interest in the industry, leadership, academic achievement, and organizational involvement.

Interested youth should request application forms directly from the PCA office. Completed applications must be postmarked on or before March 10.

"We are pleased to team up with IVOMEC to offer this very special scholarship opportunity to a young person in Pennsylvania," says McCoy. "There's no question that education, along with practical experience, is the key to the future competitiveness of the U.S. agricultural industry. Offering this scholarship is just one of the ways in which PCA is helping prepare and develop tomorrow's leaders."

Introduced in 1996, the IVOMEC: Generations Of Excellence™ program has provided more than $1 million to help fund youth-focused scholarship and leadership initiatives at the state level through organizations that support the cattle industry. Funding levels are based on state cattle producers' purchases of IVOMEC Brand products, which are manufactured by program sponsor Merial.

Association And Pfizer Scholarships Offered

The Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association has announced it will present two additional scholarships this year to young persons who are planning a career in the cattle industry.

Funding for one of the $500 scholarships is provided by Pfizer Animal Health Company, Inc. in connection with Pfizer's Dectomax Extra Education Dollars ("DEED") program. The second $500 scholarship is provided by the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association.

The applicants must meet the following criteria: be a high school senior or currently enrolled in a two or four year college; demonstrate interest in the beef, dairy, and/or veal industries; express assurance in furthering education in college, vocational school, etc.; and possess leadership skills and show intentions of eventually representing the beef, dairy, and/or veal industries in some form.

Those interested in applying for the Pfizer DEED scholarship and the PCA scholarship need only fill out one form to apply for both scholarships. However, only members of Pennsylvania Junior Cattlemen's Association or applicants whose parents are members of PCA are eligible for the PCA scholarship. Applications must be postmarked on or before March 10, 2001.

Winners will be awarded scholarships at the annual Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association Banquet on Thurs., March 29 before the Pennsylvania Beef Expo in State College.

For more information about PCA or the IVOMEC or Pfizer Scholarships, contact the PCA office at: 862 Webster Drive, State College, PA 16801, (814) 238-5888.

Northeast Order Uniform Price For Jan.

BOSTON, Mass. — Erik F. Rasmussen, Market Administrator for the Northeast Marketing Area, has announced that the statistical uniform price paid by milk dealers (handlers) regulated under the Northeast Order for January 2001 is $13.76 per hundredweight ($1.18 per gallon) for milk delivered to plants located in Suffolk County, Mass. (Boston).

The January statistical uniform price is $13.66 for delivery to plants in New York, N.Y., and $13.56 for delivery to plants in Philadelphia.

The statistical uniform price is the benchmark minimum producer blend price paid to dairy farmers, prior to allowable deductions, for milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids. The price received by an individual dairy farmer will vary as the component composition of a farm's milk differs from the established benchmarks and by the location of the plant(s) to which the farm's milk is delivered.

Mr. Rasmussen also stated that the producer price differential (PPD) for January is $3.77 per hundredweight for milk delivered to plants located in Suffolk County, Mass. The PPD represents each producer's share of the value generated by the marketwide pool on a hundredweight basis.

The PPD, which is added to the payment producers receive for their milk's components, is adjusted for the location of the receiving plant. The statistical uniform price and PPD decrease by scheduled amounts the more distant the plant receiving producer milk is from Suffolk County, Mass.

The Class prices for milk pooled in January are as follows: Class I, $17.24 (Suffolk County, MA); Class II, $12.82; Class III, $9.99; and Class IV, $12.13.

Comparable class prices for January 2000 were: Class I $14.15; Class II $11.43, Class III $10.05, and Class IV price $10.73.

The component values for January are protein, $1.6181 per pound; butterfat, $1.2896 per pound; other solids, $0.1120 per pound; and nonfat solids, $0.8765 per pound.

Milk receipts from producers totaled 2.051 billion pounds. Class I utilization, milk processed as beverage milk, was 43.3 percent of producer milk receipts. The average Class I utilization was 42.2 percent in January 2000.

The manufacture of Class II products such as cream, ice cream, yogurt, and cottage cheese utilized 16.5 percent of producer milk. Milk used to manufacture Class III products such as cheese (American and Italian) and evaporated and condensed products utilized 30.6 percent of total milk receipts. Class IV usage (butter, nonfat and whole milk powder) equaled 9.6 percent of the total.

Ohio Forage and Grasslands Council Conference Aims High

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — The cast of speakers lined up for OFGC's Annual Conference on March 2 reads like a who's who in livestock and forage production.

Featured speaker Mr. Ed Ballard, Animal Systems Educator from the University of Illinois, promises to expose the little known facts regarding the economics of grazing. In addition, he will share the economics of grazing alternatives in the bread basket of Illinois.

Accompanying Mr. Ballard will be John Mickey, a commercial forage producer and spokesperson for the American Forage and Grasslands Council. The Ohio Forage and Grasslands Council has always recognized the importance of learning from experienced producers who make a living farming and grazing. Consequently, a host of diverse Ohio producers will be represented, including:

• Darol Dickinson, who will cover an alternative income opportunity on the farm - "Leasing Hunting Rights' • Matt Cunningham, a sheep producer in southern Ohio will also be on hand to share his unique and diverse operation. • Trish Alcorn of Miami County will shed some light on grazing horses. • Randy Nelson, a beef producer in Guernsey County will share his experiences with the intensive rotational grazing of cattle. • Bill Watkins of Belmont County will join us to provide insight in the area of dairy grazing.

As with all good conferences, detailed break-out sessions have been scheduled to allow discussion and further explanation on specific aspects of forage management. Topics covered here include: Clovers in Pastures with Dr. David Barker of OSU; What is the Quality of Grass Hay, with Dr. Maurice Eastridge of OSU; and Forages for Horses with Gary Wilson, OSU Extension Agent.

This exciting program will also include displays from numerous manufacturers and dealers in forage-related products.

The conference will be held in Reynoldsburg, Ohio at the Ohio Department of Agriculture. For registration information contact Clif Little with OSU Extension at 740-432-9300 or Bob Hendershot at 740-653-1559, extension 32.

Stream Bank Fencing Is Conservation that PAYS TWICE!

1. Receive $3,800 to $35,000 ABOVE COSTS for each half mile of stream you enroll in USDA buffer programs. See details for your area below.

2. Gain the benefits of stream bank fencing:

- Improved herd health: Clean, dry cattle are healthier cattle. Wet, muddy conditions increase the risk of udder infections, foot problems and numerous other diseases spread by these conditions. Controlled access at stabilized crossings also reduces injuries from steep, slippery banks or rocky creek bottoms. Better water quality means better drinking water and higher production.

- Options for pasture management: Stream bank fencing splits a typical pasture in two. Once the electrified stream bank fence is in place, creating additional paddocks is cheap and easy. Improved management options can significantly increase the efficiency of pasture use.

- Good public relations: Agencies and the public are increasingly aware of farm management, especially around streams. Stream bank fencing is a big step in protecting streams and being a good neighbor.

- Good stewardship: Stream Buffers provide habitat for wildlife including songbirds, waterfowl and game animals. Improvements to fish habitat are large and rapid. Reduced bank erosion protects fields, buildings, lanes and bridges.

Generous funding now allows landowners to install stream bank fencing at a net financial gain.
Stream bank fencing truly is conservation that PAYS TWICE.
Act soon. Some programs have a limited life span and can enroll a limited number of acres.

Estimated Payments for a Typical Stream Bank Fencing Project

All estimates are based on 50' buffer width (top of bank to fence) on both sides of a half-mile of creek. Such a project encloses 6 acres of buffer and typically costs $15,000-20,000 per half-mile of stream. Estimates below are based on the typical 15-year agreement length.

Width requirements: USDA programs have a 35' minimum buffer width, but the added CBF/DU contribution only applies to buffers 50' or wider. CBF/DU's Habitat Stewardship Program has a minimum buffer width of 15'.

Done with USDA's
Continuous Conservation Reserve Program (CCRP):
(available statewide)

50% cost-share from FSA, 40% incentive payment from FSA on all eligible costs
$35-90/ac annual rent & maint. payment from FSA (varies w/soil type & project details)
A typical project pays about $3800 above costs for every half mile of stream.

50% cost-share from FSA, 40% incentive payment from FSA on all eligible costs
25% implementation payment from Chesapeake Bay Foundation and Ducks Unlimited
$45-135/ac annual rent & maint. payment from FSA (varies w/soil type & project details)
A typical project pays $6000 to $14,000 above costs for every half mile of stream.

Done with USDA's
Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program (CREP)
(In partnership with PA DEP, CBF and DU:
(20 south-central PA counties)

50% cost-share from FSA, 40% incentive payment from FSA on all eligible costs
50% cost-share from PA Department of Environmental Protection
25% implementation payment from Chesapeake Bay Foundation and Ducks Unlimited
$85-260/ac annual rent & maint. payment from FSA (varies w/soil type & project details)
A typical job pays $19,000 to $35,000 above costs for every 1/2 mile of stream.

While stabilized crossings are currently eligible, they may not be in the future.
Act soon to maximize your benefits.

If interested in any of these USDA programs, contact your county FSA office.

Done with
Chesapeake Bay Foundation & Ducks Unlimited's
Habitat Stewardship Program:

Available in bay watershed to address limitations in USDA programs for landowners wanting to

- create buffers in areas with existing trees
- create buffers with a 15' minimum width
- fence wetlands where there is no stream
- fence wetlands wider than 180' from a stream
- work with a non-governmental organization

Pays 100% cost-share on fence (up to two wires) and plantings
Provides BMP credits (typically $1000/ac) for buffer area beyond the 15' min width
Landowner pays for any crossings

A typical 50' wide project earns credits to pay for crossings with $1840 leftover credits for every half mile of stream. Remaining credits can be used to pay for many other BMPs

Rochester Dairy Manure Conference Scheduled

ITHACA, N.Y. — Public and regulatory scrutiny of manure management on dairy farms has increased pressure to develop manure systems that minimize environmental impact.

To achieve comprehensive nutrient management plan (CNMP) goals, the right combination of equipment and treatment systems must be selected. On March 20-22, a conference entitled "Dairy Manure Systems: Equipment and Technology" will be held in Rochester, New York, to provide an educational opportunity for dairy producers and their advisers.

System designers, farm managers, industry experts, consultants, extension educators, and university experts from across the country will share their expertise at the conference, which is coordinated by NRAES, the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service.

The conference will focus on selection and management of technology and equipment, with an emphasis on traditional and new strategies to manage and design systems that move manure from the cow to its ultimate use with minimal impact to air and water quality.

Stressing a systems approach to planning, speakers will present handling, storage, treatment, and land application options. The intended audience for the conference includes producers and farm managers and their advisers, soil and water conservation districts, nutrient management consultants, NRCS staff, cooperative extension educators, equipment distributors, university specialists, farm system designers and builders, environmental professionals, and regulatory agencies.

The Dairy Manure Systems conference will begin at 12:30 p.m. on March 20 and adjourn at 12:30 p.m. on March 22. The program will include several farm case studies, with the goal of presenting each currently used equipment and technology option in the context of a complete dairy manure system.

For each option described, speakers will be asked to review manure system goals, bedding, manure collection system, treatment, manure transport, storage, land application, fate of solids, neighbor and hydrologic constraints, costs, management, labor, maintenance, and pros and cons.

On the evening of March 20, a tabletop exhibit session/reception will be held. Four concurrent discussion sessions are planned for the evening of March 21 on the following topics: manure composting systems, custom operators, innovative treatment technologies, and small farm systems.

State nutrient management continuing education units (CEUs) for participation in the Dairy Manure Systems conference will be awarded by several states. For participation in the entire conference, Pennsylvania will award a total of 14.5 continuation credits to final certified people under the PA Nutrient Management Specialist Certification Program, and West Virginia will award 20 recertification credits.

State nutrient management continuing education credits have also been applied for from Maryland and Virginia. In addition, international/regional CEUs have been applied for from the American Society of Agronomy Certified Crop Advisers Program. For an update on the status of CEU applications, contact NRAES.

The conference registration fee is $210 is postmarked on or before March 2. Registration postmarked after March 2 and for walk-ins is $270.

Separate registration is being accepted for three optional events directly preceding or following the conference. The preconference workshop "Livestock Mortality Composting" will take place the morning of March 20; there is a $50 fee for registrations postmarked on or before March 2 ($70 after March 2).

Also the morning of March 20, the "National Livestock Environmental Stewardship Curriculum" workshop will be offered without a fee to extension field educators and others who train livestock producers.

An optional postconference workshop, the "National Agricultural Waste Management Initiative (NAWMI) — Northeast Planning Session," will run from 12:30 p.m. on March 22 through 12 p.m. on March 23. The fee for the NAWMI planning session is $60 if received by March 2 ($75 thereafter) and includes two meals. It is not necessary to attend the Dairy Manure Systems Conference to attend the optional workshops.

A free brochure includes the conference program, a registration form for the Dairy Manure Systems Conference and the optional workshops, and other information. Conference Information can also be found on the web site, www.nraes.org. Registrations will be accepted by mail or — for those who wish to pay by credit card — by Internet, telephone, or fax. To register or to request copies of the conference brochure, contact NRAES, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701; phone (607) 255-7654; fax (607) 254-8770; or E-mail: nraes@cornell.edu.

The conference will be held at the Rochester Marriott Thruway Hotel.

Cattlemen Make Plans At NCBA Board Of Directors Session

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Cattlemen have a new plan to enhance profitability built on the twin towers of increasing beef demand and improving the business climate.

The Beef Industry Long Range Plan was approved by cattle producers at the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) annual Board of Directors meeting during the 2001 Cattle Industry Convention here today. It was later ratified in the Stakeholders Congress.

The plan is designed to increase the potential for the profitability of all industry segments. It has multiple components and focuses on factors that impact beef demand, such as food safety, nutrition, positive eating experience, convenie- e and exports.

It also focuses on factors that impact the business climate for beef production including the government, public opinion, efficiency and cooperation among segments. The plan is a framework to focus efforts for the next three years, with a goal of increasing beef demand by 6 percent by 2004.

The plan also takes into account mega-trends such as demographic changes, technology, globalization and environmental issues.

• To underscore the point, the Board approved an expenditure of up to $150,000 to address a new proposed rule by the Environmental Protection Agency. The proposed rule concerns effluent limitation guidelines and concentrated animal feeding operations. If the rule is passed as proposed, many cattlemen may have to get a permit for their winter feeding or calving areas.

• Also on the regulatory front, cattlemen voted to work to amend the Mandatory Price Reporting rule that is scheduled to go into effect April 2. Specifically, they want to address the "3/60" provision of the Act and protect the intent of congress to ensure timely and useful price and volume information for cattle producers.

Under the 3/60 provision, information on the spot market from a specific region will not be reported on the mandated twice-daily basis if three packers aren't included in the report, or if one of them accounts for 60 percent or more of the data.

Since the rule affects cattle processors who process 125,000 head or more annually, cattlemen are concerned that some regions may lose the current reporting information they have due to an insufficient number of qualified packers.

• The European BSE situation was a continuing topic of discussion. The Joint NCBA and Cattlemen's Beef Board Beef Safety Committee advanced the disease to its top research priority for the coming year.

Further addressing the issue, on Feb. 3 NCBA, the Canadian Cattlemen's Association and the Conferacion Nacional Ganadera of Mexico signed a joint statement committing to keep North America BSE-free.

• Animal identification was the topic of a day-long symposium held Jan. 31 and several committees addressed the issue in their final report, which were presented to the Board. A voluntary animal ID system was endorsed with the added proviso that NCBA would oppose a mandatory system.

One exception is that NCBA favors a mandatory program for live cattle imported into the country that are not in a sealed vehicle being taken directly to slaughter.

• Still riding the crest of seven consecutive quarters of increasing beef demand, cattlemen got a 'report card' on the effectiveness of the beef checkoff. Dr. Ron Ward, an economics professor from the University of Florida, concluded that the average dollar spent through the beef checkoff generated a $5.67 net gain to cattlemen. Checkoff assessments totaled $968 million in the study period. Based on his economic models, Ward estimates they generated $6.46 billion in increased revenues coming back to the industry.

BEEF

Independent Analysis Shows Net Gain From Beef Checkoff

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — The average dollar spent through the beef checkoff generated a $5.67 net gain to cattlemen, according to an independent peer-reviewed study conducted by Ronald W. Ward, an economics professor from the University of Florida.

Ward's analysis evaluated impacts of beef checkoff programs from 1987 through the first quarter of 2000. The study was funded by, but conducted independently from, the Cattlemen's Beef Board. Ward presented his findings Feb. 3 at the industry-wide Convention and Trade Show in San Antonio.

Checkoff Analysis

Ward's analysis predicted that cattlemen's receipts increased $6.46 billion over receipts that would have existed without the checkoff as follows:

The analysis predicted total cattle producer revenues to be $321.18 billion during 1987 through the first quarter of 2000.

Those revenues were estimated to have been $314.72 billion without checkoff expenditures leaving $6.46 billion of increased revenue in producers' pockets that can be attributed to checkoff activities.

From 1987 through 2000, beef checkoff assessments totaled $968 million (less than 3-tenths of one percent of producer revenues during the same period). Half of those funds stay at the states where they are collected and the other half is forwarded to the Cattlemen's Beef Board to fund national promotion, information and research programs.

At the national level, the Beef Board has spent $337 million on promotion programs and another $100 million on consumer information and industry information programs as defined in the Beef Promotion and Research Act.

These expenditure levels were for programs within the United States and do not include checkoff expenditures for foreign market development.

"Analyses at the household level shows positive and significant responses to the promotion and information programs," Ward wrote.

"Results show rates of return at the producer level from beef checkoff programs have consistently exceeded $5 returned for every $1 collected over time.

Three separate methods of analysis show that U.S. consumers have responded to beef promotion and information programs."

President's Tax Bill

WASHINGTON D.C. — The White House delivered a tax package to Capitol Hill Thursday that includes top cattle industry priorities such as estate tax elimination, removal of the alternative minimum tax and removal of the marriage penalty, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association said today.

"It's important for cattle producers to be able to keep more of their dollars at home on the ranch and in their communities," said Lynn Cornwell, a cattle producer from Glasgow, Mont., and president of NCBA. "We wholeheartedly support President Bush's proposal to ease the tax burden on cattle ranchers and all American families."

Bush's tax proposal would reduce marginal income tax rates and eliminate the death tax, a provision in the tax code that cattle producers have opposed for many years.

The industry has persistently vied to eliminate death taxes because they can lead to the break up family farms and ranches. Cattle producing families are often faced with two options:

1. Paying accountants and lawyers to help plan their estates to avoid paying exorbitant amounts in estate taxes upon a family member's death, or

2. Selling land, property, part of the cattle herd or other equipment vital to keeping cattle ranches functioning.

"These are unfair choices," Cornwell said. "Either way, cattle producers are paying far too much of their income to avoid a tax or pay a tax whose basic premise taxing death is wrong in the first place."

Cattle producers are currently rallying support for a stand-alone bill soon to be introduced by Rep. Jennifer Dunn, R-Wash. Dunn, along with Rep. John Tanner, D-Tenn., is introducing the Death Tax Elimination Act. The highlight of the bill is reducing all death tax rates by 5 percent per year.

In the 10th year, full death tax repeal would take place.

Further, a bipartisan coalition of four senators is also introducing legislation to repeal estate and gift taxes.

Dry Cow Has Critical, High Quality Feed Requirements

ANDY ANDREWS

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — How good is your forage fed to the dry cow?

The dry cow stage is so critical to the overall profitability of the herd that it literally dictates how well the cow is going to do during lactation, noted a leading dairy researcher.

"No matter where you are, the most important cow is the dry cow," said Dr. Robert J. Van Saun, DVM, Penn State Department of Veterinary Science.

In fact, not taking care of the dry cow's critical nutritional needs could be detrimental to milk production and may result in potential long-term ill health effects, according to Saun.

Saun spoke Tuesday during the first of the two-part annual Penn State-sponsored Lancaster County Dairy Days. He spoke to more than 100 dairy producers and agri-industry representatives at the Farm and Home Center.

Pennsylvania producers can get higher quality forages day in, day out, compared to Midwest and West counterparts, noted Van Saun. By setting sights on improvement of forage quality, the tone can be literally set for "what those cows can do," he said. "If you fail to prepare the cow, you essentially fail for lactation. The dry cow program will 'set the bar' for how well the cow can do."

Forage feeding programs must be set up specifically for the dry cow's needs. The forage directly affects colostrum quality and quantity, calf health and vitality, milk yield, future cow fertility, and prevention of a host of observed (clinical) and unobserved (subclinical) diseases.

Mastitis is one of many critical diseases that can be controlled through an appropriate dry cow diet. But other diseases can be prevented, such as milk fever, grass tetany, retained placenta, and others.

Van Saun looked at several studies conducted at Cornell University and elsewhere about the importance of sustaining glucose use and conversion of the appropriate amounts of amino acids, fatty acids, and calcium essential to support milk production after the first week of calving at 65 pounds of milk per cow, 4 percent fat.

The difference between the dry cow and one that is lactating is profound. Essentially, a newly lactating cow has triple the glucose requirements, double the amino acid needs, and the cow increases fatty acid output fivefold.

But some dairy feed managers tend to neglect the nutrient needs of a dry cow. Van Saun pointed out the "twinitis" syndrome — cows that have twins. After birth, because of the drain the newborns have taken on the entire cow's metabolic system, the cow appears with all sorts of distress, uterine infections, inability to eat well, retained placenta, "the whole shebang," Van Saun said.

No matter what, the cows feed the fetus first. If not eating proper quality feed, the cow is literally robbed of nutrients and can't compensate sufficiently at lactation. This can result in mastitis, ketosis, and other diseases.

Seasonal and herd effects can also play a role, and those diseases can be costly.

When looking at feed programs, veterinarians have focused on stimulating the rumen "bugs" and do whatever is necessary to keep them running. This

Pa.'s Theme For Earth Day

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Secretary James M. Seif recently announced the theme for Earth Day 2001: "Clean Watersheds! Clean Water!"

Earth Day is celebrated each year on April 22. To help educators prepare for Earth Day 2001, DEP mailed 5,300 educational packets to Pennsylvania public and private schools, libraries, and more than 600 people who requested copies through the GreenWorks Gazette newspaper insert. The packets include posters and bookmarks, as well as watershed-education information."When young people and adults are exposed to environmental education, like our Earth Day efforts, it provides opportunities for inspiration and educational tools," Executive Director of the Pa. Center for Environmental Education Paulette Johnson said.

"rumen papillae development" is first, followed by ensuring the use of efficient amounts of energy (don't underfeed energy and protein and watch dry matter, or DM, content of feed); maintain a good calcium balance during the transition from dry to lactating cow; minimize immune system dysfunction; and match the quality care and feed programs to the dry cow's needs.

The dry matter intake influences a wide variety of dry cow health issues. But other issues, such as overall environmental management, proper bedding, and actually measuring feed values, are critical.

Producers should:

- Monitor feed delivery and cow numbers.
- Know body weights of cows to measure proper feed schedules.
- Provide proper NDF balance and monitor feed for fiber content and quality.
- Monitor and correct DM content of "wet feeds," which could drastically alter the actual DM cows use.
- Place feed in front of the dry cows 24 hours a day.
- Prevent overcrowding of feeding facilities. Allow 25-30 inches of space per dry cow per bunk.
- Manage any kind of heat or cold stress.
- Keep separate feeding groups.
- Manage the cow's body condition score (BSC). A score of 3 or lower, the cow is too thin; a score of 4 or higher, the cow is too fat.
- Keep the rumen functioning.

Feed factors are one of the most critical control points. It's important to provide fermentable starch in close-up dry cow diet.

"The biggest driver of milk yield is lactose," said Van Saun. But the animal needs glucose in sufficient amounts, built from starch fermentation.

For the close-up dry cow, feed managers need to "push up the energy densities to a lactating cow diet and provide higher protein," he said. Overall, use a blend of carbohydrates and protein sources, formulate for NDF, monitor forage quality and DM, maximize DM intake, and include energy-boosting feed additives and vitamin supplements as necessary.

Controlling milk fever with microminerals, watching for excess phosphorous and adequate calcium intake, are also important. At time of calving, producers may want to consider using calcium injections or oral supplements at calving time.

That transition phase for a cow is precarious, noted Van Saun, but a good nutrient program "can protect against stress and facility faster recovery from stress," he said.

Producers need to consider increasing trace minerals and force-feed minerals rather than offer dry cows free choice.

Dr. Jud Heinrichs, Penn State Department of Dairy and Animal Science, said producers must take a closer look at the maturity of forages at harvest. Maturity of grasses effects protein and energy levels.

Heinrichs noted that the DM content of forage "has a tremendous effect on fermentation — the amount and type of fermentation," he noted. That fermentation will be critical to energy quality of the silage.

The length of chop is critical. The chop should allow a good degree of packing and to provide the cow with efficient fiber.

The finer the silage is chopped, the more it can be compacted, and the faster it will ferment. "With more knives and power, the finer chop, the better fermentation you get," Heinrichs said.

Also, the silage must be packed relatively quickly. Every hour without ensiling means a decrease in overall forage quality (losses of sugar and starches).

For critical DM content and quality, water is a universal buffer. The wetter the silage, the more acid is produced before bacteria are killed off. But too much water can create additional problems.

Keeping oxygen away from material is essential. Yeast and mold only grows in the presence of oxygen. It's important to keep the silage tightly packed and sealed.

The DM of silage is a major influence on the fermentation taking place in silage, according to the Penn State professor. Yet for those using baleage, bale to bale variations in DM can be "awful," Heinrichs said.

Even though the field can have the same conditions at baling, the moisture content from bale to bale "is crazy," said Heinrichs.

Knowing the DM of crop when ensiling is "absolutely necessary," he said. Heinrichs emphasized using a microwave to obtain sufficient DM reading. That DM content needs to be as uniform throughout the feed as possible.

Also, using simple pH strips to measure silage pH is critical.

Heinrichs reviewed several samples of particle size on TMRs. Heinrichs pointed toward the use of screens to sift through and determine appropriate particle size. Particle size should not be too fine or too course, he noted.

Outside storage structures should be covered well, packed tight, and sealed well.

The second of the Dairy Days, March 6 at the Farm and Home Center, features a number of farmer panelists, noted Glenn Shirk, dairy agent. The panelists will be discussing the changes they have made in their dairy businesses, why they made these changes, and what their experiences have been.

Speakers at part two of Dairy Days include Tim Fritz, Chester and Lancaster counties farm management agent; producers such as Arden Landis, Raymond and Glenn Brubacher, and others; and various business and extension representatives.

For more information, contact Shirk at (717) 394-6851.

Andrews Named Editor

In the mid-1980s, Andrews worked as senior technical editor for a Navy contractor. He also worked as a public information specialist.

"For more than 45 years, Lancaster Farming has strived to be the farmer's 'desk,' so to speak, a tool with information vital to staying profitable in a variety of Northeast farm industries," said Andrews. "Readers can be assured that the same balanced, objective reporting of news will continue. There will be some new features, of course. And while coverage area expands, a loyalty to our county's heritage as the breadbasket of the Northeast will remain."

Andrews writes for and edits several new sections that were added to the production agricultural newspaper. They include Corn Talk, the newsletter of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association, a section of the paper which began in October 1993, and Foraging Around, the newsletter of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, in April 1997. Poultry Notes, another section, was added in the mid-'90s to promote the Northeast Poultry Show.

Andrews helped develop several ag books, including the Lancaster Farming Reference Guide To Animal Health and Housing, first published in the spring last year, and the Lancaster Farming 2001 Ag Directory, established in December 2000. Andrews also assisted in the writing and editing of the Lancaster Farming Reference Guide To Nutrient Management In Pennsylvania.

Andrews was instrumental in the creation, design, and development of the section, Grower & Marketer, established in January 1999.

Andrews, born and raised in New Holland, is a 1978 graduate of Garden Spot High School. He worked in the 1970s on a neighbor's beef farm.

A yield grade is quantitative, predicting the yield of retail cuts, the proportion of lean and fat. Finish is the most important factor in determining the preliminary yield grade, which is then adjusting for muscle or amount of kidney, pelvic, or heart fat. A 'Y4" animal, for example, is discounted for the excessive amount of fat.

"In this area quality grade is important because the packers are in premium and prime markets, with branded beef programs and exports to Japan. The East Coast is a high quality market," said Henning.

Case Ready Meats

Rick Fetrow, senior field sales consultant from IBP, explained "what's different in our business and how does it pertain to you, the beef producer," he said.

In the early 70s, said Fetrow, the market was swinging to boxed beef, and now in the 90s the market is moving to "user friendly" pre-trimmed beef.

Fat is now trimmed to ¼ inch in response to requests from the Japanese, who volunteered to pay the same rate but asked that the plant send more usable product and less waste. The product now costs less to ship and is labor-saving once it hits the market, said Fetrow.

Meat packaged and ready to go directly into the meat case, termed "consumer-friendly" beef, is packaged individually. This helps to increase shelf life since a large package does not have to be broken into to sell one cut of beef.

The meat is a custom-cut product that is enhanced with 10 percent water, sodium phosphate, and salt which releases when the meat is cooked for a tender, juicy product.

IBP has launched the "Thomas E. Wilson" line of case-ready products. The meat is cut with laser-guided equipment guided by cameras mounted in different directions.

In 1997 case-ready ground beef helped to solve the challenge of having less labor available, better utilizing a store's square footage, and addressing food safety issues facing retails stores.

Newswanger Retires

"real farmer" understanding of practical problems endeared Lancaster Farming to the ever expanding circulation of the newspaper. As a professional photographer, Newswanger's farm scenes on the cover became a trademark.

Newswanger has many awards. Most recently, he was honored at the 2001 Pennsylvania Farm Show by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. In addition, he received the national American Star Farmer Degree in Louisville on Oct. 27, 2000. This award is the highest award given by the National FFA Association. Earlier in 2000, Newswanger was honored for his support of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

In 1999 he received recognition as a founder of the Pennsylvania Dairy of Distinction program and in 1998 the Mid-America Dairymen Inc. (Dairy Farmers of America, Inc.) presented their communications salute award for his work in support of dairy farmers. This national award was presented in Kansas City at the cooperative's annual meeting.

Newswanger received the PennAg Industries Association Ag Journalist award when he won PennAg's statewide journalism contest. In 1993, Newswanger was made an honorary county agent by the Pennsylvania Association of County Agricultural Agents. He received Lancaster County's most prestigious ag award when he was given the 1994 George C. Delp award presented by the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry. He also received the 1993 honorary young farmer award from the Pennsylvania Young Farmer's Association, and the 1997 award for excellence from the Northeast Farm Communicators Association for the best photojournalism farm story.

Newswanger serves on the Penn State University advisory council, is a former trustee of the Pennsylvania FFA Foundation, is a member of the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders taskforce and is a member of the steering committee for the development of Pennsylvania Agriculture Education standards. His professional memberships include National Association of Agricultural Journalists, The Pennsylvania Society of Newspaper Editors, The Pennsylvania Newspapers Publishing Association, and the National Agri-Marketing Association.

A retirement party brunch is planned for Monday at the Lancaster Farming office with the employees and a few invited guests. In retirement, Newswanger plans to study Internet site development and management, do some teaching, guide visitors to Lancaster County, and travel. He and his wife Ellen have been married nearly 44 years and are avid bicyclists. They have two married children and four granddaughters.

a barrier film to keep oxygen out. A retailer pulls off the first film to allow oxygen to enter and the meat to bloom. A second, transparent film protects the meat.

In surveys, said Fetrow, customers preferred the case ready, sturdy, stackable packaging to traditional packaging. Fetrow predicts the addition of IBP plants all over the United states, so as little shelf life time as possible is lost on transporting the meat.

Hands-On Experience

Glenn Myers, manager of the Penn State Meats Lab, demonstrated cutting the side of the carcass into wholesale cuts. The hind and front quarter is split between the twelfth and thirteenth rib, said Myers, who also showed participants how to remove the chine and feather bones.

Henning carefully weighed each cut, from the 1.2 pound flank steak to the 4.7 pound of filet mignon. The trim of one side equaled 16.4 pounds, the bones 18.7 pounds, and the fat 25.1 pounds.

Roger Schaefer, FSIS inspector in charge of the plant at Penn State, demonstrated to Beef 201 students the examinations that he conducts on the animals slaughtered. After a visual appraisal, Schaefer checks the organs for growths or abnormalities, then inspects the head for presence of disease. As a last step the animals are sprayed with a lactic acid solution.

In addition, "there's always a paperwork trail to make sure that everything that leaves as food is safe," said Schaefer. Penn State also hosts a retail store to sell the meat produced at the university.

Electrical stimulations expands and contracts the muscles of the carcass to force the blood out of the muscles and give the meat a better color and improved tenderness.

Rick Fetrow, senior field sales consultant from IBP, demonstrates how packaging makes a difference in ground beef shelf life.

Glickman Awards $2.3 Million To Study Food Assistance, Nutrition Program Issues

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman has announced $2.3 million in grants for research on obesity, perinatal nutrition, and food stamp participation among the elderly.

"These projects will help address some of the most pressing food assistance and nutrition challenges facing the United States today," said Glickman.

Among the issues researchers will address are:

- The association between dietary habits during adolescence and development of obesity.
- The relationship between food insecurity and hunger and poor birth outcomes.
- How to increase food stamp participation among the elderly.

Other award recipients will examine the relationship between time and work pressures and diet quality, the relative food insecurity of immigrant households compared with other households, the extent to which parenting practices influence obesity in low-income African-American preschoolers, and the effects of housing costs on food consumption for low-income households.

All of the research projects are products of the Food Assistance and Nutrition Research Program (FANRP), administered by USDA's Economic Research Service (ERS). FANRP studies and evaluates the performance of, and issues related to, the Food Stamp Program, the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC), and Child Nutrition Programs.

For 55 years, three days a week — every week — Margaret and John Krape have been serving customers at the York Farmers' Market with fresh produce from their Hill View Farm near Hellam.

Andrew Miller, president of the York Farmers' Market, jokes with long-time customer Marie Fischer. Fischer favors shopping at the market because of its convenience, as well as the friendships which develop between vendors and their regular customers.

Oldest York Farmers' Market Granted A Facelift

York Farmers' Market will undergo a complete facelift using federal and state grants.

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Farmers selling produce from outside vending stalls along the streets was a familiar sight to many city dwellers of the mid-19th century.

But in the early 1860s, city fathers in York made a decision to provide an under-roof facility for the vendors, locating it in the growing west end of the city where population was migrating and the streets growing increasingly busy.

Thus, the York Farmers' Market, 380 West Market Street, came into existence. It's success was such that, in little more than two decades, three more of these direct-sale sites would follow. City Market opened for business in 1877, the "old" Eastern Market in 1885, and Central Market in 1888.

Now the historic York Farmers' Market, where some vendors are fourth-generation stand holders, is about to undergo major refurbishing. Federal and state grants of $350,000 will help fund the complete rewiring of the historic brick structure, including the addition of air-conditioning to counter sweltering summertime heat. Other planned improvements include repointing the brick, painting inside and out, replacing old window frames and redoing the overhead skylights.

"This began a few years ago,

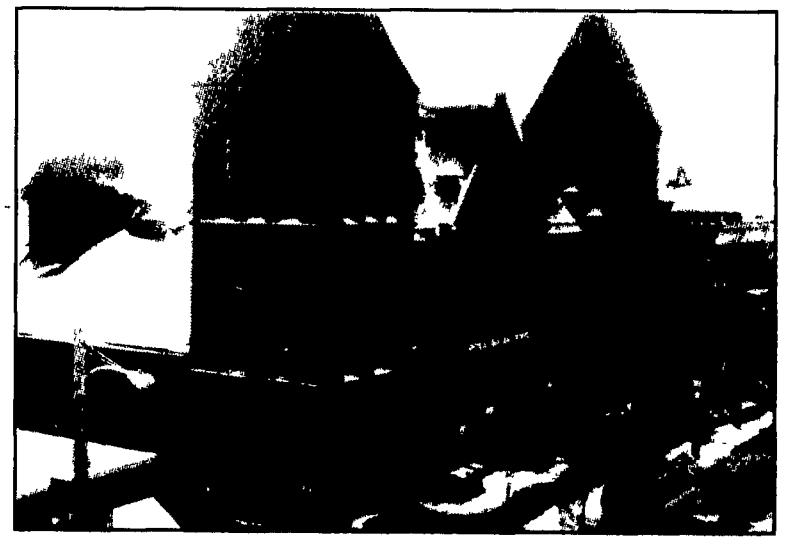
New Features For Historical York Central Market



Central Market's five towers was constructed in 1888 and has an interesting history.

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Where can you find homemade pot pie dough, egg rolls, sticky buns, and three kinds of persimmons, all under the same roof.

Why, under the roof of a farmers' market, of course.

Farmers' markets are the place to find not only the unusual as well as the more ordinary, but to get directions on how to fix them as well, emphasizes Dan Leese, operations manager of Central Market in downtown York.

"I wanted to make a persimmon pie last fall; and not only did we have persimmons here in market, we had three different varieties," says this enthusiastic supporter of the market experience. "Where else are you going to find that?"

Leese, a native of Fulton County and son of a dairy and general farm family, has been heading up operations at Central Market for about 18 months. He works closely with the market's board of eight directors, headed by new president Dave Yates and vice-president Pat Kinsley, in planning upgrades of amenities to the soaring old structure, while keeping its unique history and architecture intact.

The massive Central Market, with its interesting detail of five towers, was constructed in 1888, designed by noted historic York architect John Dempwolf. According to Leese, little of the building's physical structure has changed over the last century.

Building on a good thing

You might recognize the engines, drivelines and axles on the new New Holland TS tractors. They have excellent reputations based on past performance. Thousands of customers have put these components to hard use and benefited from their performance and durability.

So, New Holland wasn't about to change a good thing. They made other improvements to these 70- to 90-PTO-hp tractors instead – like increasing the horsepower, improving the comfort of the cab, relocating the fuel tank for added convenience, adding a top road speed of 25 mph, upgrading the electrical system and adding outlets and modernizing the styling.

Better see these exciting 70- to 90-PTO-hp TS tractors for yourself. And find out how good design can become even better.

New Features For Historic York Farmers' Market

movable tables, allowing for them to be pushed back to the sides for a large meeting area," Leese explains. He relates a story he's been told of a revival once held at the market, with a reported 5,000 attendees seated, and an additional 1,000 standing around the sides. Stands have since been made permanent, with cooking and refrigeration facilities added to some of the vendor sites.

Leese notes that administration of many city markets has been assumed by their municipal governments, or are publicly owned. Central Market, however, continues to be a privately-run entity, but with public stock, most of which is hold by local business people who see it as a good investment. The board of eight directors determines the financial and operations policies, while Leese oversees, on a part-time basis, the physical operations of the market. He also works with the board in developing and implementing its vision for the market's future.

Part of that vision is already implemented, with the recent purchase of an adjoining house where Leese visualizes a courtyard setting to be designed, and perhaps some office space. Ground will be broken in March for the construction of a two-level parking facility to serve market customers. To accommodate the trucks which many of the vendors use to handle their produce and merchandise, as well as avoid that "claustrophobic" sense of many multi-level parking structures, the lower level and drives will have higher-than-usual ceiling clearance and extra lighting.

Central Market's board also visualizes expansion of the mezzanine area, currently used for seating for the downtown office workers and students who frequent the market for their lunch breaks. Along with added mezzanine seating capacity could be the addition of a few upscale "boutique" vendors. With no space for expansion outward, due to the surrounding downtown buildings, Leese quips that "the only way we can go is up."

Enhancing the "fragrance" of Central Market will be an on-site bakery currently in planning, sending the enticing aroma of freshly-baked bread, rolls and buns through the market's soaring inner space. Upgraded lighting, including the possible lighting at night of the market's towers, are also under consideration.

"All ideas are on the table" is the board's philosophy as they study and plan to upgrade and revitalize market physical facilities, to continue attracting future generations to its unique setting.

"We are very committed to keeping the farmers here that we have now," Leese emphasizes. In addition to local retailers of fresh fruits and vegetables, several butcher-vendors offer fresh meats and deli items, along with locally-produced potato chips and related salty snacks, baked goods, eggs, candies, flowers and plants, dried fruits and nuts. An array of vendors offer "fast food,' fixing fresh-sandwiches to order, along with tempting hot soups, a variety of salads, freshly-brewed hot beverages and cold drinks.

Many of the vendors are from families which have been "tending" market for decades, their history closely intertwined with that of York's market traditions. Names like Hartman, Fitz, Henry, Miller, Godfrey have hung over some of the stands for several successive generations, who in turn serve succeeding generations of customers they come to know as friends.

Central Market saw a serious downturn in occupancy during the late 1960s and early 1970s, with almost half of the stands vacant at its lowest point. But the mid- 1980s brought a drive to revitalize the area — and the market — and entice people back to spending time in downtown York. Today, the market is fully occupied with more than 70 vendors, though some of the stands are seasonally closed during the winter months, and would-be vendors are being turned away for lack of space.

To further enhance "marketing" of the market, consideration is being given to expanding its days of operation beyond the present, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday schedule. Tuesdays and Thursdays are heavily patronized by employees of downtown businesses, who line up, often several deep at vendor stands, for quick lunches.

"On Saturdays, there's a different crowd of customers, those who are here for the more traditional market experience," Leese says. Saturdays also spur more stands to open which feature fresh produce and baked goods, as well as those held by craft vendors.

Central Market is located at 34 West Philadelphia Street, with parking available across the street at the Philadelphia Street Parking Garage. Free parking is available on Saturdays at a lot near the corner of North Beaver and Philadelphia streets.

when the city of York hired an employee to work on revitalizing the downtown, out to the 300-blocks. Our market is one of the bigger draws in this area," explains Andrew Miller, president of the vendor-owned York Farmers' Market.

"We had been talking about adding a store in the market, where vendors could sell their excess produce and have it processed into value-added products, like jams and jellies. Then we ran into electrical problems; the present wiring couldn't handle the kind of processing kitchen we were considering."

The market's board of seven directors, all current or former vendors, had hoped for the grant funding for the rewiring to become available during fiscal 2001 first quarter. Since rewiring will require a brief complete shutdown of the market, and summertime is the busiest season, the electrical revamping may go on hold until next fall.

York Farmers' Market is primarily owned by the vendors who utilize it to market their fresh meats, seafood, produce, plants, flowers and handcrafted items every Tuesdays, Friday and Saturday. The vendor-owners bought out the market's previous private owner when it was put up for sale in 1975. Andrew Miller, 23, assumed the presidency in 1998, when his great uncle, Charles Ilyes, retired from the position he had held for many years.

About 50 vendors rent space at the west-end market, filling it to about 80 percent of capacity. A maintenance employee handles routine cleanup, opening, and closing of the market, while an area contractor tackles more complex repair jobs.

"It's a good social meeting place," observes local customer Henry Debes, who has been coming to the market since he was 15. "You don't see your neighbors on the street, but do run into them here at market."

Debes is one of many who stop by the produce and meat stand tended by Andrew Miller, if not to buy on a particular day, then at least to trade jibes with the smiling, easy-going market president.

"I get abused," Miller jokingly laments, while several regular customers gather to tease the young man who has been helping at his grandparents stand since he was 12. His grandparents, William and Kitty Miller, opened their stand in 1947, offering fresh, home-grown vegetables and chicken, both products still being marketed by their grandson more than a half-century later.

Debes recalls the market's earlier days, when local youngsters often frequented the market with their wagons, earning perhaps a quarter a trip for hauling shoppers' purchases back to their homes.

A row or two of stands away in the old market building stands another long-time family establishment, the meat and produce vendor area of John and Margaret Ilyes Krape. Margaret is the first-born of a family of six children, four of them still continuing farmers-market sales at various locations.

Margaret remembers coming to market with her parents when she was just a small child, especially the ice cream cones they received as treats. The Krapes began tending market in the tradition of her family when they married 55 years ago, returning three days weekly, every week, since they were newlyweds.

One of the premier summer market crops at their Leiphart Mill Road farm, near Hellam, was strawberries. Today, they still grow much of their own produce during the growing-season months.

The Millers and the Ilyes personify the tradition that has made York's farmers' markets so popular with their steady customers, who return regularly to their favorite stands for meats, seafoods, produce, and baked goods they consider fresher than what they find in supermarkets. Up and down the aisles hang modest signs noting families who continue to keep that tradition, names like Chronister and Hartman, Lehman, Godfrey, and Weaver, who has been selling meats there for decades.

"You get to know the people here and it's convenient," affirms regular market shopper Marie Fischer, York.

Shoppers Janet and Bill Stockwell, also of York, echo that sentiment, adding that they can call vendors like Andrew Miller with an order, and it is all ready for them to pick up when they arrive.

"I like supporting the local farmers," Janet Stockwell says. "You know where this food comes from."

Reinforced by the financial assistance of state and federal funding, along with the determination of its board and supportive vendor-owners, the guiding fathers of the York Farmers' Market plan that it will continue to bring local farmers and consumers together for many more generations.

Don't Get Caught In The 'Area Code 809' Scam

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — Remember when people were getting outrageous charges for 900 numbers?

This is a new version of that old scam. How can you protect yourself? Don't answer e-mails, phone calls, pagers, or web pages which ask you to call an "809" phone number.

What happens if you call an "809" numbers? You will find a very ugly surprise on your next phone bill. Unsuspecting folks have been charged more than $24,000. Yes, that $24,000!

The National Fraud Information Center says this fraud is spreading quickly and costing victims a great deal of money. There can be several variations but all of them operate basically the same.

How The Scam Works

You receive a message on your answering machine or on your pager, which asks you to call a number beginning with the 809 area code. The reason you're asked to call varies; it can be to receive information about a family member who is ill, to tell you someone has been arrested or died, or to announce you have won a fabulous prize. Many people unthinkingly return the call.

If you call from the United States, you will be charged as much as $2,425 per minute. You might get a person who tries to keep you on the phone as long as possible. You might also get a long recorded message. The point is to keep you on the phone to run the charges up. A 10 minute call can show up on your bill as a $24,00+ charge!

Why It Works

The 809 area code is located in the British Virgin Islands (the Bahamas).

The 809 area code can be used as a "pay-per-call" number, similar to 900 numbers in the United States.

Since 809 is not in the United States, regulations of 900 numbers require that you be notified and warned of charges and rates involved when you call a "pay-per-call" number.

The company also does not have to provide a time period during which you can end the call without a charge.

While many U.S. phones have 900 number blocking to avoid these types of charges, 900 number blocking will not prevent 809 calls.

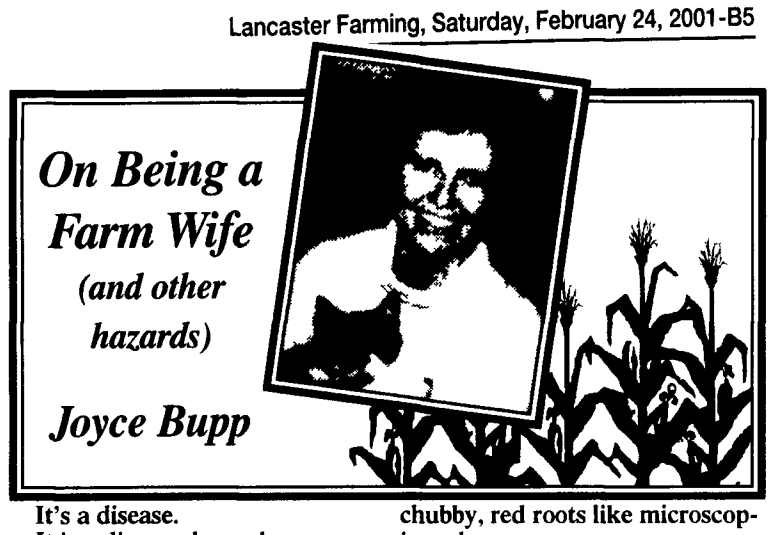
How Can You Protect Yourself?

Do not return any calls to 809 numbers no matter how you get the message.

Be sure all your family and friends know about this scam and do not make calls to 809 numbers.

Remember you might also get these requests to call 809 numbers on Web pages and e-mail.

Prevention is key to fighting this scam. If you become a victim of this scam, is it a nightmare to try to fight the charges. That's because you did actually make the call. If you call your local or long distance phone companies you will probably not get much help.



It's a disease.

It is a disease, by gosh.

And it's an annual thing, just like the flu. Our favorite retail places all know that, and they're trading on our seasonal weakness.

A practice otherwise known as "marketing."

While I'm not normally an impulse buyer or spender of any retail significance, a layout of this merchandise never fails to trip my trigger, knock my resolve, send me to my consumer knees.

Which is the reason that more than a dozen little packs of "marketing" have been added to the inventory of previous accumulations waiting in a large plastic container hibernating at a chilly spot in the basement.

Garden peas and radishes, sunflowers and zinnias, cosmos, morning glories, sweet peas...

My name is Joyce. And I need help.

It's all the doing of those enticing garden merchandise layouts. Seeds. Bulbs. Plants. Potting soil. Gardening gloves, peat pots.

But it's those "10 for $1" seed packet sales that trigger my complete downfall. Those little packets with just enough seeds to give you a small crops of — not the newest, latest, biggest or most ballyhooed new introductions — but generally long-established, dependable varieties of familiar veggies and flowers.

Why do I even buy or plant radish seed, for instance? Radishes can be had at the supermarket, ready to slice and scatter on a salad, for...less, one area chain was selling three bags of them for a buck, just last week.

Even 10-cent seed packets of them are probably no bargain, when you begin to calculate the time needed to get a spot ready to plant, tuck them in the ground, wait a couple of weeks and then hope the tiny, underground, radish "riddleresworms" haven't tunneled through the chubby, red roots like microscopic moles.

On the other hand, when an early, warm, sunny afternoon clobbers me with a raging case of seed sickness, a dime-pack of radish seeds is a real cheap antidote. Plus, if you've even tasted a freshly-pulled radish, still cold from the soil in which it grew, you know no prepackaged radish even comes close in crisp, tingly taste.

Which is why there is not one, but three, packs of radish seeds here on inventory.

I need help.

Nor had I planned to plant garden peas. Sugar snaps, maybe, but not shelling peas. With snap peas, you can pick a bowlful and have a bowlful for your effort. After picking and shelling garden peas, you might have a cup of results for your effort. Or two cups with a lot of effort.

So why is there not one, but four packs of garden peas here? Because one pack would only plant a tiny short row somewhere along the edge of the flower bed on some early, enticing planting day. Four packs — those 10-cent jobs — will make the effort more worthwhile. Canned peas are blah. Frozen peas are good. Fresh peas are manna from the gods.

When I yanked off the cover of the storage container to put the latest treasures away until planting season, I came face to face with another batch of "10 for $1" picked up just a few weeks ago. And forgotten about. Which is why we also now have four packs of flowering sweat pea seeds. Four kinds of sunflowers. Eight packs of zinnias. Several kinds of melons, squash, cucumbers. Single packs of a whole bunch of stuff.

Help! I need help.

Starting about the middle of April would be a good time. Bring your own garden tools.

I'll supply the seeds.

Potatoes For Every Occasion

Whether it's a new recipe or an old standby, potato dishes offer incredible taste.

While some people don't like broccoli or cabbage, I've never heard of anyone not liking potatoes.

It is reported that archeologoical evidence indicates that 4,500 years ago, Peruvians had developed several techniques to improve and store potatoes, including processing flour using a freeze-dried method, which is evidence that potatoes have been a staple for centuries.

Today, 14,000 acres of Pennsylvania farmland is dedicated to growing potatoes, a $22.8 million business for farmers.

Thomas Jefferson is credited with starting America's love affair with French fries, when he introduced "pomme frites" at a White House dinner.

According to Barbara Skelly of Harrisburg's Broad Street Market, you can keep potatoes sprout and wrinkle-free for about two months by placing an apple in a bag of potatoes.

Skelly also said that potatoes are natural stain removers. Let the stain dry, rub a freshly cut potato over stain a few minutes, and wash as usual.

An 8-ounce baked or boiled potato has only 100 calories. But if you're like most people, you won't settle for a plain one when incorporating cheese, sour cream, butter, and numerous other ingredients enhance potato's natural goodness.

Rhonda Mast, Morgantown, writes that she is proud to be a potato farmer's wife and happy to see requests for potato recipes in this paper. Whenever the Mast family is invited to a covered dish event, she is asked to bring a potato dish. She sent in several of her favorites that readers are sure to enjoy.

So, celebrate National Potato Month by eating potatoes for breakfast, lunch, and dinner.

GOURMET POTATOES

6-10 large potatoes
2 cups shredded cheddar cheese
¼ cup butter
⅓ cup chopped onion (optional)
1½ cups sour cream
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons butter for top
Paprika

Peel potatoes, cut in quarters, cook until soft. Cool completely (overnight in refrigerator works well). Shred coarsely.

In saucepan over low heat, cook onion and butter 5-8 minutes. Do not brown. Add cheese, stir until almost melted. Remove from heat. Blend in sour cream, salt and pepper. Fold in potatoes.

Put potato mixture in greased 9x13-inch casserole; dot with butter and sprinkle with paprika. Bake at 350 degrees for 20-30 minutes.

If desired, crumble 8-10 strips cooked bacon with potato mixture.

STUFFED BAKED POTATOES

4 large baking potatoes
¼ cup butter, softened
½ teaspoon salt
1¼ teaspoons garlic powder
Milk
3-ounce package cream cheese, softened
2 tablespoons minced onion
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 cup cheddar cheese
Paprika

Bake potatoes, cut in halves, and take out inside of potato (leaving skins for shells). Mash potatoes; add butter, salt, garlic powder, and milk (enough to moisten properly).

Beat until smooth. Add cream cheese, onion, and parsley. Mix together well. Fill potato shells with potato mixture. Top with shredded cheese and paprika. Place in greased 9x13-inch baking dish. Refrigerate for several hours or overnight — they will bake better. Bake at 450 degrees for 25 minutes.

Note: You may add 1-1½ cups cooked broccoli or 8 strips cooked, crumbled bacon into potato mixture.

Nancy Wiker holds a bread bowl filled with Bob's Baked Potato Soup.

Featured Recipe

One of Nancy Wiker's husband's favorite soups is his mother's homemade potato soup. Her husband Bob likes the soup thick with chunks of baked potato and bits of potato skins. Wiker adapted the recipe a bit and serves it in a bread bowl, garnished with paprika and crumbled bacon.

Dubbed Bob's Potato Soup in honor of her husband, Wiker made the family favorite and served it at a recent workshop she taught on "sensational soups."

Bob's Potato Soup was a big hit and one you will want to try.

BOB'S BAKED POTATO SOUP

2 large baking potatoes
4 tablespoons butter
2 green onions, chopped
4 tablespoons flour
1 cup chicken stock
2 cups milk
½ cup sour cream
4 slices bacon, crumbled
3 ounces cheddar cheese, grated
Additional milk
Salt and pepper
Paprika

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Wash and scrub potatoes. Bake until fork tender. Split the potatoes in half, scoop out the meat. Mash about half the potato with a fork. Chop the rest, set aside. Chop the skins. Melt butter in a medium saucepan, saute onions over medium heat, blend in flour.

With a wire whisk, add chicken stock. Blend in milk. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until it begins to thicken. While the milk mixture is hot, whisk in the potatoes and skins. Add sour cream and most of the crumbled bacon. Season with salt and pepper. Heat thoroughly, but do not allow to boil. Add the cheese a little at a time until it is all blended in. Thin with a little additional milk if desired. Serve in a bread bowl, garnish with paprika and remaining crumbled bacon.

Parenting, Childcare Resources Available

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Sue Gichero understands children. She knows what child care providers should offer to provide a healthy environment for children. She knows about government regulations for childcare providers and the many resources available to make care giving easier and happier.

As a mother of two sons, Tom, 18, and Joe, 20, and a former childcare administrator, Gichero has worked 20 years in childcare.

Recently Gichero was hired by Berks County Penn State Extension Office, Leesport, to train childcare providers, 4-H clubs' clothing and textile leaders, and assist in family living programing.

Gichero will assist Fay Strickler, family and consumer science agent, in providing intergeneration activities and parenting programs. Strickler handles food, nutrition, parenting, childcare, health, consumer, family, and home management topics.

Strickler said that when she joined extension services in 1972, two full-time people were employed until funding was no longer available.

Strickler is now president-elect of Epsilon Sigma Phi, a cooperative extension professional organization that requires traveling nationwide.

"I'm looking forward to the team effort in meeting the many needs of the extension," Gichero said.

"There is a growing need for quality care giving," Gichero said.

To fill this need, Gichero will offer on-site training and hold workshops for parents and caregivers.

The state requires caregivers to complete six hours of training annually. There are many places to receive additional training, but Gichero believes extension offers the best.

She said, "I'm excited that our resources are research-based from Penn State. Our information is current and accurate."

Gichero said that caregivers are often overloaded with work and have little time to keep updated on resources and information that make their jobs easier.

"I don't thing people understand the difficult responsibility of caring for children," she said.

Childcare workers are on the low end of financial salaries when compared to other occupations.

"The problem is that staff salaries are based on what parents can afford to pay."

Parents, she said, too often select a childcare provider based on cost rather than what is best for the child. Preschool care varies from $85-$125 per week. Infant care is higher, Gichero said.

"It's important to understand the setting you put your child in. Take time to know where your child is spending each day," Gichero said.

Many parents receive subsidized child care. Although some parents need only pay $5-$15 a week, they sometimes do not pay their amount. This creates a dilemma for the childcare provider.

Unfortunately if parents refuse to pay their fee, a provider is forced to terminate services.

"If you truly care about children, you don't want to see children moved from one childcare provider to another. Ideally children should stay with the same childcare provider."

Sue Gichero, left, and Fay Strickler review materials suitable for teaching preschoolers science activities. The books, games, puzzles, tapes and even a creature catcher help teach children about insects.

The extension not only offers services to childcare providers but also to parents. In fact, the extension has many activities such as puppets, games, and books for parents to borrow. Materials are classified. If a parent or childcare provider wants to teach preschoolers math skills, materials are available, from basic activities such as sorting buttons according to color and shape to matching numerals placed on a match box car to the garage where the car should be parked.

The extension also has many resource books available as a lending library for parents and childcare providers.

"We like to encourage more hands-on learning rather than rote memorization," Gichero said. For this reason, she has a plethora of ideas to incorporate learning into everyday activities. For example, parents can encourage children to sort silverware.

"Play is work for children. That's how they learn," Gichero said of the need to use everyday experiences as learning.

"Children lead hurried lives. Slow down and enjoy the moment," Gichero advises parents. "Kids are involved in so many activities that they can become as stressed as parents. Accept children as they are; their success should not be at the expense of self."

Stress learning rather than performance. Model joy in learning. Gichero said, "When a child makes a mistake, respond with that's OK, that's how we learn."

Gichero said that she is amazed that many parents tend to give children too much control.

"I think parents feel guilty because they haven't been with their children all day. Some things should not be negotiable. If it's cold outside, a child must wear a coat. Yet some parents

CHEDDAR POTATO SOUP

4½ cups milk
2 cups water
1 cup chopped ham
1 medium onion, chopped

ANSWER — A York County reader wanted a recipe for apple cake using a boxed cake mix and raw apples. Thanks to Rose Stoltzfus, Slanesville, W.V., for sending this recipe.

Apple Raisin Coffee Cake

1 package white cake mix
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1¼ cups water
¼ cup vegetable oil
2 eggs
1½ cups Granny Smith apples, peeled, cored, sliced, chopped
½ cup raisins

Streusel:
½ cup flour
⅓ cup packed light brown sugar
¼ cup butter
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a 9x13-inch pan for cake, combine cake mix, cinnamon, and nutmeg until well blended. Beat in water, oil, and eggs until mixture is smooth. Stir in apples and raisins. Pour into prepared 9x13-inch pan. For streusel, combine all ingredients with pastry blender until mixture is the consistency of coarse crumbs. Sprinkle over cake batter. Bake 35-40 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool completely in pan or wire rack. Yield: 12-15 servings.

ANSWER — Margaret Zimmerman, New Holland, wrote that one of her favorite recipes from this column was destroyed in a house fire. She asked for the recipe for Old-Fashioned Soft Molasses Cookies appeared in this column about two years ago. Thanks to Mildred Miller, Hershey, for sending the recipe. She writes that instead of blackstrap molasses, any combination of dark corn syrup and molasses can be used to suit your family's taste.

Old-Fashioned Soft Molasses Cookies

2 cups blackstrap molasses
1 cup granulated sugar
1 cup shortening
1 egg
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup buttermilk
1 tablespoon baking soda
½ teaspoon ginger
3 cups whole wheat flour
2½ cups white flour

Mix molasses, sugar, shortening, and egg. Beat well. Add salt, soda, ginger, whole wheat flour, and buttermilk; mix well. Gradually add white flour to form stiff dough. ANSWER — Frances Hanlin, Mt. Storm, W.V., writes that she is having trouble churning butter. They have churned butter for years, and she thinks they are doing everything the same as before. The cows are the same and the feeding the same, but when the cream is churned, it whips up but the butter particles won't gather together. Anyone have some insight into the cause of this problem? Thanks to Virginia Zimmerman, Lititz, who writes that when cream is whipped too fast it will not work. Frances did not mention the process used to make butter, but Viriginia writes that you cannot make butter in the blender or whip it too fast otherwise.

Thanks to Fran Pierman, Stockton, N.J., who writes that when she was a kid, her family churned butter every weekend. When butter particles would not come together, her dad said the butter was too warm, so he added enough ice to the churn to bring the butter together. It always worked.

Seafood is a great choice during Lent or anytime of the year because it's low in fat and calories. Most raw fish and seafood species contain about 100 calories per 3½-ounces. A few low-calorie favorites are cod, sole, flounder, monkfish, haddock, shrimp, clams and mussels. A 3½-ounce portion of cod, for example, has just 82 calories; an equal serving of monkfish has a modest 76 calories. All can be prepared easily with few added calories.

The key to preparing finfish and preserving its naturally high water content — and thus keeping it moist and delicious — is not to overcook the fish. Overcooking leads to loss of taste and natural juices. All you need is a squeeze of lemon, a few herbs and spices, and about ten minutes, to prepare a delicious entree of most fish and seafood species.

Fish and seafood contain many of the vitamins and minerals that the body needs each day. Among them is thiamin, riboflavin, pantothenic acid, niacin, phosphorous, potassium, iron, iodine, fluoride, zinc, selenium and copper. A few examples: clams, mussels and oysters are good sources of iron and zinc; most canned salmon and sardines contain high levels of calcium. Nutrition experts recommend adding a few servings of seafood to your weekly menu, but does not recommend taking fish oil capsules.

Fish is also a good source of protein. One 3½-ounce serving of fish or seafood supplies about half the total protein required by the body each day.

Here are some suggestions for making seafood a key part of your lighter day.

- Stock up on frozen fish and shellfish. Today's "frozen at sea" technology means that premium quality frozen fish is readily available.
- Select water-packed tuna over oil-packed varieties as it is significantly lower in calories. For example, a 3½-ounce can of light tuna, packed in oil, then drained, still contains 200 calories; the same tuna, packed in water and drained, has only 131 calories.
- Store several cans of salmon or water-packed tuna in the refrigerator, so they'll be chilled and ready to make quick and easy sandwiches and salads. Canned seafood products are also great for last-minute casserole or other main dish ideas.
- Surimi products are an inexpensive addition to a diet plan. Surimi products, for example initiation crabmeat, are made from white fish, such as Pollock, so it's very low in calories (only 99 calories per 3½-ounce serving). Include it in a green salad for lunch.
- Serve a seafood appetizer or soup before dinner to cut your appetite. Try boiled shrimp, spritzed with lemon juice, or smoked salmon with a tray of fresh-cut vegetables. Pickled herring or pickled salmon are also light choices to start the evening meal.
- Save time by poaching two fish or seafood meals at once, serving one immediately and refrigerating the second for lunch the next day.

WIFE Addresses Controversial Concerns

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — "Do you have ethanol in your tank? If not — why not?" was posed to members of Congress by Women Involved in Farm Economics (WIFE) in a pamphlet to the 107th Congress.

WIFE's biofuel project was announced at the winter-board of directors meeting in Cheyenne, Wyo. on Feb. 8-10.

WIFE's #1 Priority in 2001 is to convince Congress and the Administration that this country must have a comprehensive National Energy Plan that includes renewable fuels. WIFE Energy Chairman Sheila Massey, Animas, N.M. led the formulation of an action plan to promote biofuels. WIFE was a pioneer in the promotion of ethanol and will continue educational and promotional activities for the public.

President Cindy Cruea, Pierre, S.D., led the group in selecting components to support the farm bill debates. Among the items favored by WIFE are Agricultural Marketing Transition Act (AMTA) payments at 1996 levels of funding, loan rates realigned to current soybean loan levels for all program crops, and the continuation of the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) based on regional farming practices.

Wyoming Governor Jim Geringer welcomed the organization to Wyoming. Jerry L. Crader of Raymond James Financial Services, Inc. presented alternatives for financial planning and retirement. Mantha Phillips, legislative aide from the office of Representative Barbara Cubin of Wyoming, discussed agricultural legislation passed by the 106th Congress and gave insight into issues that will be faced by the 107th Congress.

"Safe, healthy food begins with secure, profitable farm and ranch families," was the message from Dave Carter, Rocky Mountain Farmers Union president, as he discussed Country of Origin labeling and how to effectively sell the idea to legislators. Bobbie Franks, executive director of the Wyoming Association of Conservation Districts, urged WIFE to work on credible data legislation so total maximum dairy load (TMDL) determinations are based on accurate information based on science and history.

"Foods produced through biotechnology are as safe or safer than conventionally produced foods" is a safe statement according to Cindy Lynn Richard of the Council for Agricultural Science and Technology. Techniques for media interviews were presented by Ms. Richard. WIFE members left the workshop prepared to address the media concerning biofuels, the farm bill, and biotechnology.

quibble needlessly over whether or not the child wants to wear a coat," she said.

"Set boundaries for choices. Give choices that are acceptable either way a child chooses. Children need adults to help guide them and make choices," Gichero said.

In addition to workshops, extension offers numerous written materials that can be mailed. Parenting newsletters, Toddler Topics, and other publications are available in both English and Spanish.

Gichero would like to see more intergeneration interaction to strengthen families.

Gichero and her husband Joe live in Fleetwood. Gichero, who has a degree in home economics and early childhood education, enjoys gardening, sewing, and crafts. "So this position is perfect," she said.

What A River!

Did you know there are 54 different species of fish in the Chicago River? Along with the fish, mallards, herons, wood ducks, muskrats and beavers call the river home, too

The Chicago River itself is just one part of the Chicago River System, which is more than 130 miles long

In the 1800s, Lake Michigan was a source of drinking water for the city However, with the waste put in the Chicago River by industries located along its banks, heavy rains would push polluted water into the lake The polluted water led to deaths and disease, so they constructed an underground tunnel to take water from further out in the lake When the pollution problem returned, the flow of the river was reversed in 1900 so sewage and other waste would no longer harm the drinking water

Most of the fish population is made up of carp and goldfish There are also bullheads, darters, minnows, sunfish, bass, and even trout and salmon that come in from Lake Michigan

Each year, 52,000 commercial, recreational and passenger boats pass through the river However, the river is probably most noticeable one day each year That's because a pipe fitters union dyes the river green for St Patrick's Day

Can you name 10 items that have been pulled from the Chicago River? These are just some of the things that have been found during river cleanup days

- A 500-pound safe
- A car
- A kitchen sink
- A water heater
- An outhouse
- Golf carts and balls
- Motorcycles

Obesity Gaining Ground In America

It seems like every few weeks, there's another story in the news about obesity in America. Does anyone know why Americans are so fat?

It's true. The latest figures from the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta show an increase in obesity from about 12 percent of the population 10 years ago to nearly 20 percent now.

The reason? The short answer is a simple one: Obese people consume more calories than they burn, and the body stores the excess as fat. But the reasons behind this are, of course, more complex. Differences in a body's metabolic rate can have a big effect on weight gain and weight loss. Regular exercise, which helps build muscles, is one way to increase the body's metabolism. So, exercising more gives a one-two punch against obesity — the immediate energy outlay helps you burn calories you've consumed, and more muscle mass increases your baseline metabolic rate.

A recent study at the Brookhaven National Laboratory, reported in the medical journal "The Lancet," offers a suggestion for why some may be prone to obesity: It seems that obese people tend to have fewer dopamine receptors in the brain. Dopamine is a neurotransmitter that helps produce feelings of satisfaction and pleasure. The finding is leading some scientists to believe that some people overeat to stimulate the dopamine "pleasure" circuits in the brain, just as addicts do by taking drugs. However, the findings could mean just the opposite — overeating could cause a decrease in the receptors. Scientists just aren't sure yet.

Other studies have shown a link between obesity and insulin levels, and of levels of a hormone called leptin. As time goes on, more physical causes could be found for abnormal weight gain.

While scientists search for explanations for obesity, we can still do our part to live a healthier lifestyle.

Massers Operate Largest Potato PackingFarm On East Coast

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

SACRAMENTO (Schuylkill Co.) — Sacramento not only sounds as if it belongs in California, but the 3,500 fertile acres and the expansive packing company of Keith and Helen Masser seems more reflective of a Western farm than of rural Pennsylvania.

The farm, tucked between Hegins and Lyken valleys, includes land in both Dauphin and Schuylkill counties.

It is not by accident that the progressive potato growing operation mirrors the large Western produce farms with massive packing houses.

"We must grow with the times if we want to survive," Helen said. "Potato production is a nationwide industry."

When Helen and Keith took over the family potato farm, Sterner Masser Inc., in 1976, it had sales of $650,000. Last year, Sterner Masser Inc. topped $13.5 million. They employ 90 people.

Massers' son David joined the family business in 1999 after graduating with an ag business degree from Penn State. A daughter Julie will graduate from Penn State in May with a degree in biology and engineering and continue studies in graduate school.

"We require our children to get off the farm before they come back to work for us," Helen said.

Helen and Keith followed that same advice. Helen grew up on the Tallman potato farm about 20 miles from Keith's family farm. The couple began dating at Penn State, where Keith attained a degree in ag engineering and Helen in biology with a health emphasis in nutrition.

Neither planned to return to their family farms, but when their first child was born, the Massers took stock of their options.

"We decided the farm was a great place for children to grow up, and farm work makes it easier to instill our values," Helen said.

The Massers expanded over time. They work mainly with wholesalers that place potatoes in retail outlet chains.

"In order to work with chains, you must keep the customer happy. Nationwide, potato production is at levels we have never seen before — and prices are lower than before," Helen said.

Helen is in charge of most of the financial end of office management. Keith, an ag engineer who helped design the operation and makes sure everything flows smoothly, was named 1998 master farmer, and served as former president of both the Pennsylvania Co-Operative Potato Growers, and the National Potato Promotion Board, and vice president of the National Potato Council. David oversees the plant's operation.

Being a partner in the family business is only part of the responsibilities Helen tackles. She is the first woman chairman of the National Potato Board. During her three-year tenure on the board, Helen has been part of the steering committee to change the direction of the nationwide board.

"The board previously hired an ad firm. While they produced good ads, we saw it was not increasing potato consumption," Helen said. After extensive research, the board decided that "instead of viewing potatoes as a commodity, our focus became channel marketing."

Helen explained that research showed that while consumers liked the taste of potatoes, they saw potatoes as an inconvenient food to prepare. To meet the demands of consumers who are known to usually make spur-of-the-moment decisions on what to have for dinner, the board began a different marketing strategy.

> Sterman Masser Inc.

They started offering fresh cuts, a ready-to-cook potato. According to funded studies, if fresh cuts are placed by the meat counter, sales dramatically increase by 36 percent. But it's difficult to convince store managers to change placement of potatoes. The board is working with retailers to show how potato placement increases sales.

Another marketing strategy is to offer flavored mashed potatoes and red skin potato wedges to institutional markets such as hospitals and schools.

"As a board member, I need to take off my hat as shipper and look at what is best for growers and as a unit rather than just me," Helen explained about board's change of focus.

For example, as shippers, the Massers do not offer fresh cuts. Most Washington state growers grow for the french fries markets. But both are affected by the industry as a whole.

"An increase in consumption is a benefit of all. We each have our little piece of the pie," Helen said.

Potatoes are also being marketed in different ways. Consumers want uniform sizes when buying potatoes. They want smaller packages. To meet the varied demands of retail outlets requires shippers such as the Massers to buy potato varieties that they haven't previously grown.

New potato varieties continue to be developed. Many of the new varieties grade better because of better uniformity and less susceptibility to blight and other diseases.

The National Potato Board had established criteria in 1972 requiring all shippers to pay two cents for every 100 pounds of potatoes shipped to fund marketing efforts.

The NPB has 111 members determined by the ratio of potatoes grown in each state. For example, Pennsylvania has only one representative compared to Idaho's 26 members.

"Idaho's state budget is larger than the national budget because growers from that state pay 11 cents for promotion per every 100 pounds shipped," Helen said.

About 550 acres of potatoes are grown on the family's 3,500 acres. A three-year-crop rotation includes potatoes, corn, soybeans, and wheat. Grain is a cash crop. The Massers grow mainly round whites, and only store about one-fourth of what they grow.

"If we want to be a supplier for supermarket chains, we must supply varieties for baking, reds, and whites."

To maintain their markets, the Massers have potatoes shipped in bulk, which they package and distribute. Many are sold under chain and company labels.

The Massers do not have a sales person but mainly market through the Pennsylvania Potato Cooperative.

"It's a changing scene. Two years ago we marketed directly for 70 percent of our business. Now, that's only 20 percent, and the remainder goes to brokers," Helen said.

Chains bid out business as one unit supplied by brokers. This means that the Massers continue to provide potatoes to the same chains they had previously, but now they must provide potatoes through a broker rather than directly. Warehouses also want deliveries on time and do want to store a big inventory.

"We anticipated this change in 1998," Helen said of the family's decision to add a $5 million addition to facilities to enable their business to compete in a changing market.

The leading edge technology includes computer-controlled sprayers and planters, center pivot irrigation, air harvesters, computer packaging, bruise reduction equipment, instant pricing, satellite and weather information.

The benefit of living on the East Coast is having closer proximity to 25 percent of the state's population and within three hours drive of big cities such as New York, Washington, D.C., Baltimore, and Philadelphia.

Eight tractor and trailers enable the Massers to make almost all their deliveries, but they hire other trucks to bring in shipments.

rigates, and growers in the East could also, they face greater weather havoc. In 1999, a drought lasted through the growing season and then dumped 18 inches of rain the last two weeks before harvesting.

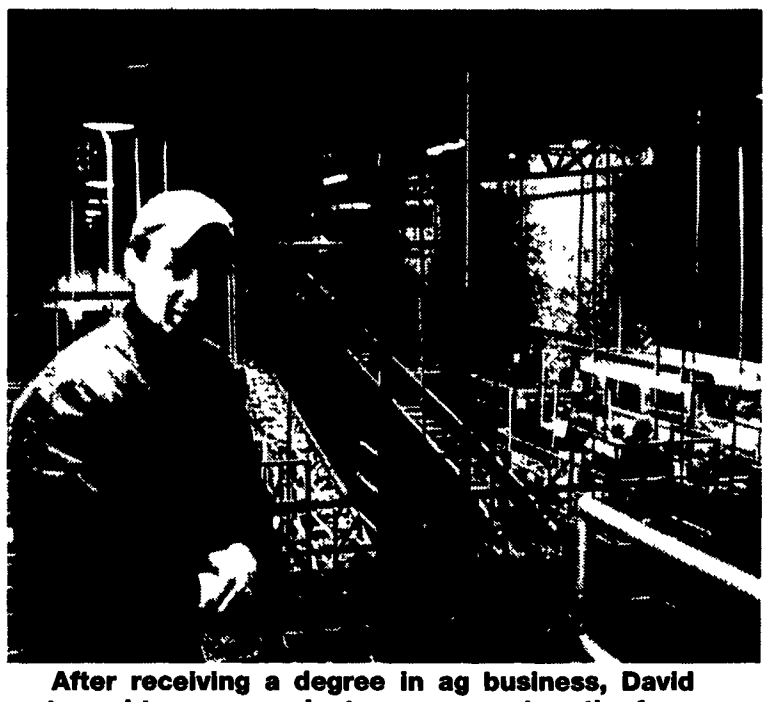
"It's that kind of weather that even irrigation couldn't protect us from," Helen said of crop failure. Blight from high humidity is another problem farmers in the area face. Western farmers have more acreage, making larger machinery costs more feasible. Land costs in the West are also cheaper than in the East.

Although harvesting requires long hours during the months of September and October, it's Helen's favorite time of the year. Seeing the potatoes in storage brings a great rush of satisfaction, and one the Massers missed during 1999's drought. But the year 2000 packed the warehouses.

The packing process from start to finish requires 90 employees. Everything is fully automated. Conveyor belts transport the potatoes from unloading through washing, grading, packing, and shipping.

The technology is amazing, from the electronic eye that measures the bin levels to prevent dropping damage to the electronic sizing that takes pictures to accurately sort potatoes.

"We have a unique, flexible grader," Helen said of the machine that adapts to different sizes and varieties. "Most of the western operations handle only one type of potato, but here we package all varieties, so we need to make sure each shipment is kept separate."



After receiving a degree in ag business, David returned to oversee plant management on the family farm.

Last year, Helen accompanied the NPB to India to evaluate the country for export marketing. Since most of India is vegetarian and most of their food is fried, U.S. growers view french fries as a viable export.

Dehydrated potatoes are also viewed as potentially good exports. Recently the USDA included dehydrated potatoes as an approved product for use in private volunteer organizations, which is used to supply food to refugee camps and similar services.

Serving on the NPB has enabled Helen to gain a much better understanding of the overall view of the potato industry.

"We are a global industry. In a competitive situation, we need to market our crop in terms of what consumers want not just concentrate on producing a big crop, but on what makes potatoes more attractive to consumers," she said.

She sees India as the next new frontier for potato growers to provide a product for quick serve restaurants. "However, before such steps are made, we must make sure companies will use U.S. markets instead of importing from closer countries."

She is also concerned about India's heavy tariff of 67½ cents. The problems will be continued to be tackled by NPB.

For relaxation, Helen plays golf, reads, and every once in a while sews.

But always, the goal remains for both the family and the industry.

"If we are not growing, the business is going backward," Helen said.

Miss Iowa Changing Attitudes About Disabilities

Wanting to change attitudes, she is the first woman with a visible disability to compete for the crown of Miss America.

"It's very important to me to know that my life is making an impact on others," she explained.

Raised in Urbandale, Iowa, as the middle of five daughters born to Liz and Vern Uchytil, she became a patient at Twin Cities Shriners Hospital at age 2. Visiting the hospital every six months for checkups, she first received a prosthetic hook-style hand, which helped her develop the muscles on the left side of her body, and later received myoelectric and cosmetic hands. For her, using a prosthesis is no different than wearing contact lenses or having braces.

During the Miss America welcoming ceremony in Atlantic City, N.J., when she stepped up to the microphone to give her introductory statement, Theresa told her fellow contestants to keep an eye out for her prosthesis. "If you see one lying around, it's probably mine," she said.

While participating in the preliminaries for the nationally televised Miss America competition, she did not wear her prosthesis during her swimsuit or evening gown presentations — only during her interview with a panel of judges. A former national baton-twirling champion who led the band at Iowa State for five years, Theresa also left the cosmetic hand backstage during her fast-paced talent routine.

Since early in her life, she simply learned to do things differently. At the age of 6, a friend asked her to take baton lessons, which evolved into private lessons because of her budding abilities; she learned to toss a baton with her right hand and catch it with her left arm.

"I owe a lot of my success to the fact that my parents always supported me," Theresa said. "We had a rule in our house — once you start something, you don't just quit. No exceptions. When I wanted to be a baton twirler, nobody asked me if I could do it; my only concern was, could I be the best?"

Theresa remembers a day on the grade school playground when her prosthesis came off and some of the kids laughed and yelled, "Captain Hook!" She got back on the monkey bars and went across it using her right hand and left arm. "The kids stopped laughing, she said. She went on to participate in volleyball, basketball, track and student government throughout school.

Graduating from the Greenlee School of Journalism and Communication at Iowa State in 1998, she received a speech communications degrees. Today, she is a program manager for higher education at Gateway Computers, taking a one-year leave of absence to fulfill her duties as Miss Iowa. With scholarship money received from participating in the Miss America Pageant, she plans to continue her education by obtaining an MBA degree with an emphasis in marketing.

Computers monitor potatoes from delivery through washing, grading, packaging, and shipping.

Beef Industry Launches Program With Figure Skating Star

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — A new program has been launched to reach youth about the benefits of eating beef. A checkoff-funded public relations campaign featuring figure skating sensation Sasha Cohen will target magazines and other information sources used by girls.

The announcement was made during the 2001 Cattle Industry Convention in San Antonio by the Cattlemen's Beef Board and the National Cattlemen's Beef Association.

The NCBA and the United States Figure Skating Association (USFSA) have teamed up to promote the importance of a healthy diet and the role that beef plays in the development of girls ages eight to 12. Findings by the checkoff-funded Beef Industry Youth Task Force, released in 2000, revealed that girls of this age are the most important youth target audience.

"At this age, girls are forming lifelong attitudes about foods. What they eat before entering high school is often what they feed their own families when they become mothers," says Scott George, a beef producer from Wyoming and chairman of the NCBA Youth Education and Information Subcommittee. "We often think of youth only as a long-term audience. Through our task force research, we discovered just how influential youth are in determining what foods are eaten by families today."

Sasha Cohen, 2000 U.S. Championship silver medallist, has enthusiastically joined this effort as spokesperson for the beef checkoff program. Cohen, 16, is a native of California and began skating when she was seven. At the 2000 U.S. National Championships in Cleveland, Ohio, she placed first in the short program, second in the free skate and second overall.

To stay on top of her game, Cohen believes in eating a variety of foods, including beef. "Keeping a high energy level for training and competing is a challenge and eating nutritious foods is important," said Cohen.

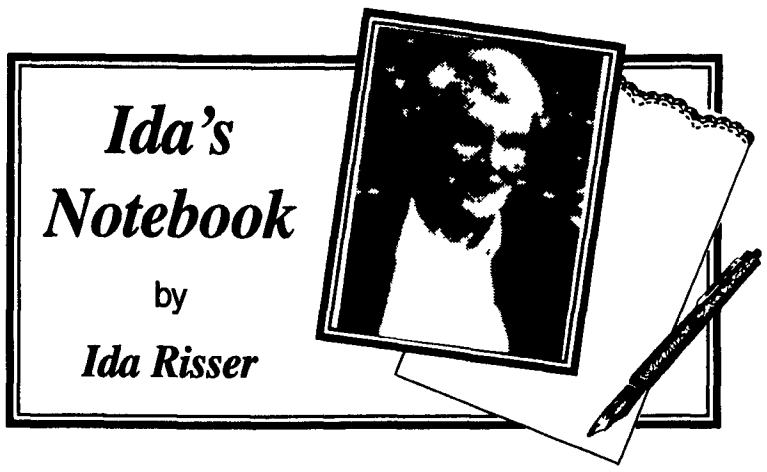
"Eating foods like beef, vegetables, fruits, bagels and yogurt help give me the strength to effectively prepare for competition."

"The USFSA is committed to improving the lives of young athletes and looks forward to working with the NCBA on this initiative," Phylis Howard, USFSA president stated. "The organization strongly advocates proper nutrition habits as a way to boost positive body image for all youth." Research shows female adolescents require protein, iron and zinc, key nutrients found in beef. The NCBA seeks to establish positive attitudes towards beef and to educate young consumers on healthy food choices.

"We are thrilled to work with the USFSA and Sasha Cohen to reach out to girls and teach them about the importance of a healthy, well-balanced diet," says Barbara Selover, NCBA executive director of nutrition education.

"Sasha is one of the sport's future superstars and is an excellent role model. She understands the importance of having a strong body to support her rigorous routine. Sasha eats healthy foods such as beef to keep her ready for competition."

In addition to this new public relations effort, checkoff funded youth programs include school education kits, the popular BurgerTown web site (www.burgertown.com), and a program just now being developed to partner with a major youth organization.



On Sunday we attended the last service to be held in Zion Lutheran Church in Leola. The congregation has decided to build a new sanctuary across the highway as they need parking space. The old brick church will be torn down. Another reason for the move is the fact that worship services are held on the second floor, which is not available to handicapped people.

This move entails moving only a few of the beautiful stained glass windows. My family gave two of these windows that will be auctioned together with pews and ornate woodwork.

To see the church torn down where you were baptized, confirmed, and married is sad. My sisters and I, with our husbands, had lunch together afterwards. Our oldest daughter from New Jersey also was with us. Her husband is on a three-week business trip to the Orient and was in Australia that particular day.

Her youngest son spent the day on the farm playing with his cousins. This grandson has a head of jet black hair. He brought me a Valentine box of candy on Saturday.

Another sad happening this weekend was the fact that my Hamilton watch was discovered missing. My parents gave it to me in the 1930s and I prized it highly. I've known for years that if it ever was lost, I would be devastated. And, I am! It might be in the Mt. Joy area as that is the last time that I wore it.

Money cannot compensate me for it as it was solid gold. I know we are not to prize such things too highly, but it is one of the few gifts that my parents ever gave to me when I was a teen-ager.

Beef Is Off And Running

DENVER, Colo. — Beef's increasing convenience is the focus of a three week advertising burst that began last week across the country. Two new television commercials are featured in the burst, which come on the heels of a one-month nutrition ad burst conducted in January in magazines and on television. Both are part of the industry's extensive "Beef. It's What's For Dinner" campaign.

The convenience commercials began airing on cable and network television Feb. 5. They will be seen by about 51 million women ages 25-54 — the target audience — an average of six times throughout the year. They will air about 115 times each week.

Coordinated by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association for the Cattlemen's Beef Board, the campaign's two new 30-second commercials contain humorous scenes that show how convenient beef entrees fit today's lifestyles. In "Booster Seat," a teenager comes downstairs to eat with his family, finding his old booster seat in the chair. "Been a while since the whole family has been at the table?", the narrator asks, as the mother serves a delicious, quick-to-prepare beef meal.

In the other commercial, a young boy is walking down the sidewalk when he detects an aroma that he associates with his grandmother. "Grandma," he whispers, as he sprints down the street to his house, where he finds his mother pulling a quick-to-fix pot roast out of the microwave.

Research shows that the promotion of new beef convenience products is having an impact with consumers. According to Gallup tracking polls, awareness of heat-and-serve beef products after the October 2000 advertising burst were at 62 percent, compared with 43 percent in October 1999.

Consumers will see television spots on such cable networks as Food TV, Arts & Entertainment, Lifetime and Home & Garden. The commercials will also appear on "Good Morning America", "All My Children", "60 Minutes" and "The Tonight Show", as well as syndicated programs such as "Martha Stewart Living" and "Rosie O'Donnell".

Soups For All Tastes

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Thousands of recipes are printed in cookbooks, magazines, and Websites, allowing easy access for the creative cook in search of a new recipe.

The drawback is that one doesn't know until the soup is made whether it's a recipe the family will enjoy. After the expense of ingredients and valuable time required to make the recipe, the last thing a busy homemaker needs is a dish that induces groans.

That's the benefit of attending cooking workshops. Not only do participants have the opportunity to taste the recipes but also learn lots of tidbits that make cooking easier and tastier.

Nancy Wiker, family consumer science agent, taught a workshop on "sensational soups" last week. She introduced some new flavors such as oatmeal soup. Served hot, the soup tastes similar to cream of rice soup, although no cream or rice is included in the recipe. The use of 1½ cups of regular oatmeal provides the healthful benefits of nutrients and bran. The oatmeal swells and becomes surprisingly rice-like.

Oatmeal soup is a recipe that many cooks would be hesitant to try because it sounds so strange — and perhaps a bit too healthy to taste good. However, it is the ideal soup to taste test to determine whether or not it is a recipe you want to pursue for your own use.

Oatmeal soup brought favorable comments from many of the participants. However, a few voiced the opinion that it was too bland. But again, a bland soup can be easily doctored by adding spices and flavorings of your preference.

Even if you don't want to try the recipe for oatmeal soup, which is printed in today's selection, "You can use oatmeal to thicken many varieties of soup rather than using rice or pasta," Wiker said.

Here is the recipe for adventuresome cooks.

OATMEAL SOUP

1½ cups regular oatmeal (not quick-cooking or instant)
4 tablespoons butter
1 large onion, chopped
3 cloves garlic, minced
6 cups chicken broth
2 large tomatoes, seeded, chopped
Salt and pepper to taste

Toast raw oatmeal in a large heavy skillet over medium heat, stirring frequently, until it is browned but not burned (about 10 minutes). Set aside.

Melt butter in a 4-quart s. ucepan, add the onions and saute until softened, adding the garlic for the last two minutes. Add chicken broth, tomatoes, and toasted oatmeal. Bring to a simmer and cook about 10 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Yield: 6 servings.

WIKER'S TIDBITS

• Using Clear Jel to thicken soups causes a smooth, soft thickening.

• Do not prewash chicken. According to food safety rules, more harm is done by splattering water from raw chicken on the sink that can contaminate cooked food. Raw chicken is thoroughly washed at processing plants.

• If you don't smell the aroma of a spice when you loosen the lid of a jar, it is probably outdated.

• Food that is irradiated is marked on the label with a small circle containing three green leaves.

• Rivels is Amish soul food.

• Don't need to package Bouquet garni in a bag for cooking, but it makes it easier to remove the leaves when serving.

• Brown 1 pound of bacon and freeze in small packages for easy access.

• Soups become thicker if allowed to stand awhile.

• After adding flour to soup, make sure it comes to a bubbling stage or soup will have a starchy flavor.

• Do not cook soups after adding sour cream, sour cream substitute, or cheese because it will curdle.

• Use oatmeal to thicken soups in place of rice, flour, or pasta.

• Cooked, dried beans explode if heated in a microwave.

• Eggs can become rubbery if soup containing eggs is reheated in microwave.

OVEN-BAKED BEAN SOUP

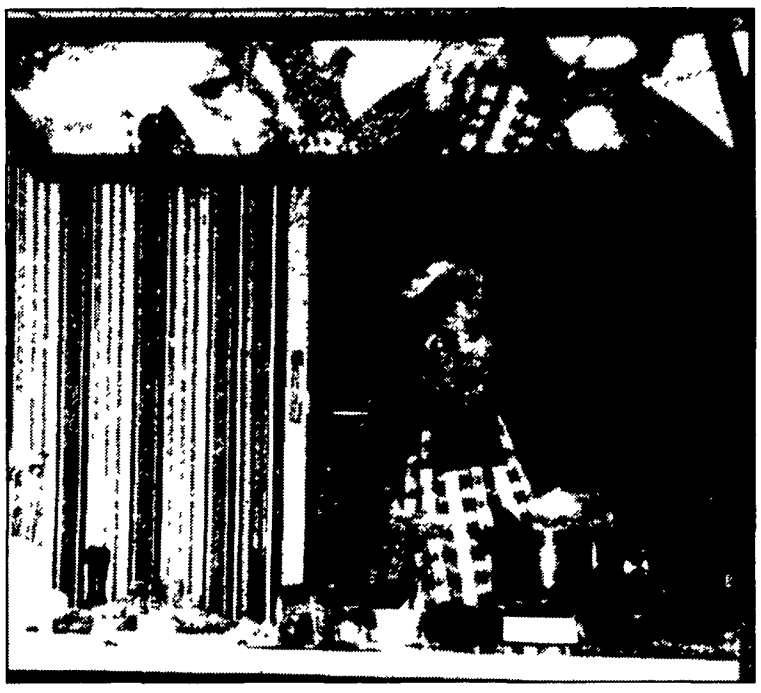
Enough water to cover beans
3 cups water
3 cups lowfat chicken or vegetable broth
½ cup ketchup
¼ cup molasses
1 cup onion, diced
2 cups raw sweet potatoes, peeled, diced
1 cup green pepper, diced



Nancy Wiker demonstrates proper methods for preparing soups.

Workshop participants sample Oatmeal Soup and other varieties during the workshop.

½ teaspoon dried thyme
Black pepper to taste

Place the beans in a large container and add enough water to cover them by several inches. Note: To soak beans quicker, place in a pot, cover with water, bring to a boil; cover kettle, remove from heat, and allow to stand one hour. Drain and proceed.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Place ingredients into a large ovenproof Dutch oven and heat on top of stove on high heat. Bring to a boil, stir well, and cover. Place Dutch oven in the middle of oven and allow to cook until beans are tender, about 2-3 hours. Add more liquid if needed. Makes 6 servings.

Gratinee is a French cooking term referring to a topping of cheese, bread crumbs, and butter that is browned in the oven or under the broiler until crispy. The crispy surface is considered the best part, and shallow, ovenproof dishes made especially for gratins allow for a generous amount of the topping.

FRENCH ONION SOUP GRATINEE

3 tablespoons butter
4 cups thinly sliced onions
5 cups beef broth
1 beef-flavor bouillon cube or 1 teaspoon beef-flavor instant bouillon
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Dash pepper
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese
¼ cup grated parmesan cheese
6 slices French bread, toasted

Melt butter in Dutch oven or large saucepan over low heat. Add onions; cook 15 minutes or until onions are golden brown and tender, stirring occasionally.

Add broth, bouillon cube, Worcestershire sauce, and pepper. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat; cover and simmer 20-25 minutes.

Meanwhile, in medium bowl, combine cheeses.

To serve, place six ovenproof bowls on cookie sheets for ease in broiling. Ladle soup into bowls. Top each with slice of toasted bread; sprinkle each with about 2 tablespoons cheese mixture. Broil about 3 to 5 inches from heat for 1-3 minutes or until cheese is bubbly. Makes six 1-cup servings.

Wiker reminded participants that many soups can be adapted to suit individual tastes or for more healthful ingredients. Cheese varieties especially are interchangeable in many recipes. Some prefer the taste of cheddar and others, Swiss. However, many lowfat cheeses do not melt well.

On busy days you can use purchased canned broth, bouillon cubes or granules required as a base for many soups. Follow the directions for dissolving cubes or granules in water and proceed as recipe directs.

However, homemade chicken or beef stock offers better flavor. Made in large quantities, you can divide it into pint-size containers and freeze until needed. Here is a recipe for chicken stock.

CHICKEN STOCK

2 pounds chicken backs, necks and/or wings
8 cups water
2 small onions, quartered
3 ribs celery with leaves, cut into 3-inch pieces
2 carrots, scrubbed, cut into 3-inch pieces
Bouquet garni:
½ teaspoon thyme
1 bay leaf
½ teaspoon marjoram
2 teaspoons fresh parsley
6-8 peppercorns
1 teaspoon salt

In a Dutch oven, combine chicken and water. Bring to boil. Skim off any residue that rises to the top. Reduce heat and simmer for 30 minutes. Prepare bouquet garni by tying herbs in a cheesecloth bag. Add remaining ingredients, simmer partially covered 2-3 hours or until meat comes off bones easily.

Remove bones, strain broth. Pick meat and refrigerate or freeze for later use. If a more concentrated stock is desired, simmer stock uncovered until it is reduced as desired. Pour into a low flat container. Cool uncovered in refrigerator. Skim off fat. Cover and store up to 3 days or freeze up to 6 months.

COLD SOUPS

In addition to hot soups, Wiker distributed recipes for gift soups, which has ingredients layered in a jar with directions for making.

She also made a cold soup, Swedish Fruit Soup, which is served as an appetizer or snack.

For a copy of the recipes, call Wiker at the Lancaster extension office, (717) 394-6851.

SWEDISH FRUIT SOUP

8-ounces pitted prunes cut up (1-¼ cups)
4-ounces dried apricots cut up (¾ cup)
½ cup golden raisins
4 cups water
2 cups orange juice
⅓ cup sugar
3 tablespoons quick tapioca
½ teaspoon salt
Zest from one lemon
3-inch stick cinnamon
6 whole cloves
3 cardamom pods (optional)

In a large saucepan, combine all ingredients except cinnamon, cloves and cardamom. Place spices in a cheesecloth bag or tea ball. Add to fruit mixture. Bring to a boil over high heat, reduce heat and simmer for 30-40 minutes until fruit is tender. Remove spices. Makes 12 (½ cup) servings. Serve cold.

CHILLED RASPBERRY SOUP

2 cups fresh raspberries or 2 10-ounce packages frozen raspberries, thawed
1-½ cups water
1 cup cranberry juice cocktail
¾ cup sugar
1 cinnamon stick
3 whole cloves
1 tablespoon lemon juice
8-ounce carton raspberry yogurt
⅓ cup dairy sour cream
Cinnamon

Place raspberries and ¼ cup water in blender; puree until smooth. In large saucepan, combine pureed fruit, remaining 1-¼ cups water, cranberry juice cocktail, sugar, cinnamon stick and cloves. Cook over medium heat until mixture begins to boil; remove from heat. Cool. Strain soup into large bowl. Add lemon juice and yogurt; whisk until well blended.~ Cover; refrigerate until cold. Pour into individual serving dishes. Top each with sour cream; sprinkle with cinnamon. Makes 9 (½ cup) servings.

Tip: If desired, pour mixture into blender container and blend at low speed until smooth.

Notes To Dads

Dads In The Kitchen

Does it make sense that the majority of professional chefs are men, yet the role of home meal preparation has traditionally gone to the moms of the household?

Dads get to become masters of the grill and carving the turkey. In talking to the men in our office, many say they like to cook and have their specialities, but most do not take charge of meal preparation everyday.

Tom is responsible for Friday dinner, and Tony specializes in Sunday brunch.

I grew up in a traditional household where my father only stepped into the kitchen when my mother was away, which was infrequent. When he was in charge,we often ate T.V. dinners or hot dogs with sauerkraut which we raved over.

Although my mother was a very good cook, Dad's meals were really special. In today's world, the majority of moms are working outside of the home and meal preparation may fall to dads more frequently. More dads are raising their children as single parents than in the past, and with the current divorce rate, dads may have shared custody or kids staying with them for longer periods.

Where dads in the past may have had their specialty foods that were received with accolades, dads today may have to plan, budget, and prepare routine, everyday food that moms may have done in previous generations. The responsibility of planning well balanced meals that the kids will eat can be challenging.

Patrick, a young unmarried man from our office, said that he loves to cook Asian food and interesting stews. Will his kids turn up their noses and ask for a peanut butter sandwich? As creative moms have often found, kids can certainly destroy all desire for experimentation with a "yuk, what is this?"

How can dads be sure that their children are well fed and still feel some of that "Master of the (Culinary) Universe" feeling?

The best way to start is with planning. If your children are old enough, ask them what they would like to eat. They may say spaghetti every time you ask them so plan that for one meal with variation for the others. You may give them options to chose from. If they are old enough, you may assign each child a dinner to prepare. Sprinkle some adult food between the macaroni and cheese or chose one dinner a week for that Thai stir fry. Even dads who prefer take out will need to plan some home meals between fast-food pizza.

Get your kids involved in the meal preparation. Preschoolers can set the table if you make it convenient for them. Have plastic plates and cups and store them in lower cabinets so they can reach them safely.

Older children can make salads, open canned vegetables, and use the microwave oven. Expect children to do these tasks and turn off the television during this time so conversation can flow.

It may be frustrating to watch little hands do what you could do more quickly or neatly, but food preparation is a life skill that needs to be developed. My son once commented when he was 12 that he would find a women to cook for him so he did not need to learn these skills. Now he is living in his own apartment, but I haven't heard that this chauvinistic attitude has attracted a live-in cook.

When dads are only occasional cooks, the nutritional value of the meal is rarely considered. Everyday meal preparation should include all of the food groups from the food guide pyramid if you want to keep your children healthy and growing. Many past meal planners have tried to include a protein source such as meat, fish, chicken or beans, a starch such as a potato, rice, or pasta and a colorful vegetable with each dinner. This fits the meat , potato and green beans meal but can also include vegetable soup and a sandwich. Calcium rich foods such as milk or cheese and fruits also need to be included in the day.

Having fruits and vegetables on hand will increase the likelihood that you will eat them. And kids don't care when. If you serve grapefruit for dinner or make milkshakes for breakfast, they'll love it. Even if dads become the primary meal planner, they can still make it special. Enjoy a creative approach and get the kids involved. The men in my office who said that they liked to cook learned to prepare meals when they were kids. We all like to eat, shouldn't we all cook?

Several mothballs.

ANSWER — Ben Kimsinger, Meyersdale, inquired if anyone remembers that some Farmall Cubs had a one-arm high lift in the 1950s. Where could he find one? Bob Stockdale, Macungie, wrote that the loader mentioned is a No. 1000 international model. The Cub, with its 12-inch front wheels, is really too light for this loader. It also fits (with no changes or other parts) on the Super A where it is a very useful and trouble-free loader that can lift about 600 pounds. It would be OK on the Cub for very light use or as a collector item.

Make as many cuts with the hacksaw as needed until it fits snugly but still screws on easily.

Philadelphia Furniture Is Bold, Varied, Desirable

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

LEMONT (Centre Co.) — "They're not going to steal it!" Dick Pencek says with humor, "And everyone knows about it at auctions."

Pencek, who teaches Early Pennsylvania Decorative Arts and Furniture at Penn State, is talking about Philadelphia furniture made between 1730 and 1800 in the Philadelphia area. Unlike diminutive New England furniture, there's a boldness found in Philadelphia furniture; its beauty is well known and it's heavy.

"That's over six feet high," Pencek says pointing to a Queen Anne highboy standing along one wall of his Lemont home. "A shorter person couldn't use the top drawers."

The highboy is only one of many formal Philadelphia pieces found in his living room. Pencek tips back one of several chairs to show what features distinguish Philadelphia furniture.

"Philadelphia furniture has phenomenal carving just look at this ball and claw foot. It has a cabriole leg, or S curve. See how beautiful the curve is? Even the carving varies within Philadelphia furniture from the restrained embellishment found on Quaker furniture to the tasteful Gothic splat carving to the overly ornate.

"This is a transitional Queen Anne chair," he says pointing to another. "It was probably made by William Savery, a friend of the Sharpless family."

The Sharpless family built a stone house along Ridley Creek near the present city of Chester around 1700. The chairs Pencek owns were part of a set of six found in the original stone house. The chairs were sold in 1895 and brought varying prices. A descendent, Anna Sharpless, inherited two from that sale and purchased a third in 1929 for $450. They were exhibited in 1938 at the Philadelphia Museum of Art by the Sharpless family.

This cherry tea table shows a suppressed ball pedestal.

Pencek points out the finer details of three Philadelphia tea tables in the room. "This one has a birdcage underneath to swivel the table. Ninety-nine percent of the birdcage tables have square birdcages. This one is round. Chester County is the only place where furniture makers made round birdcages. Notice the dish-top lip. It's a classic Philadelphia form."

Pencek turns to one tea table that has a suppressed ball pedestal with a tripod base. "If it had a birdcage, it would be a step higher in desirability. It's the tiny features that make a big difference."

A figured walnut chest in another corner of the room was made in Berks County, and written on the underside is the furniture maker's name, who it was for, and where it was made.

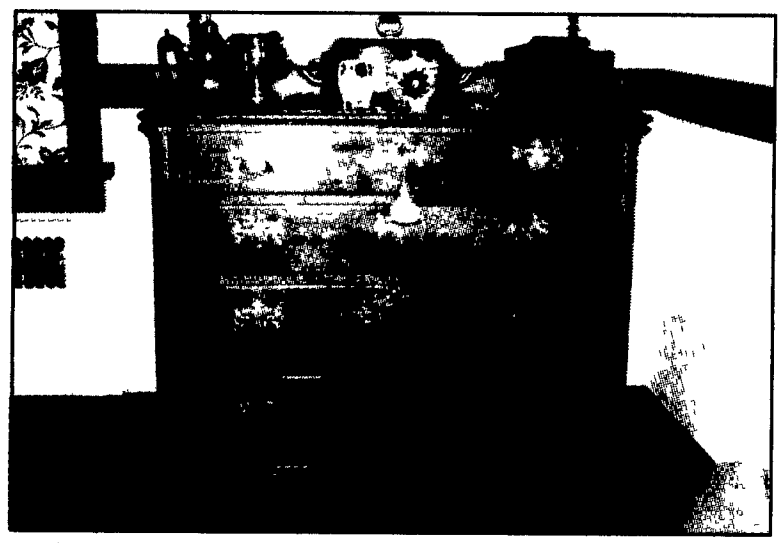
The signature on Pencek's highboy is even more fascinating. He pulls out the lower drawers and shines a flashlight toward the back. Written in white chalk is H. M. Boone, Pottstown, that's Boone of the Daniel Boone family.

"Many signed in white chalk or pencil. You see it often on plank-bottom chairs. Some pieces were branded."

The desire for Philadelphia furniture is unmistakable. Pencek received an invitation to the preview of the Winter Armory Show honoring Colonial Williamsburg furniture. The exhibition was being held in the Tiffany room at the 7th Regiment Armory on Park Avenue at 67th Street in New York City and hosted by people with names such as Rockefeller.

"People attending this show don't ask prices," Pencek said.

Although Pencek didn't go to the show, he did have a glossy, half-inch thick catalog with full-page ads that featured only one piece of furniture on each page. He turns to one page in particular. It shows a highboy just like his.



This figured walnut chest was made in Berks County. The signature of the maker, the date, and for whom it was made is written on the bottom of the piece.

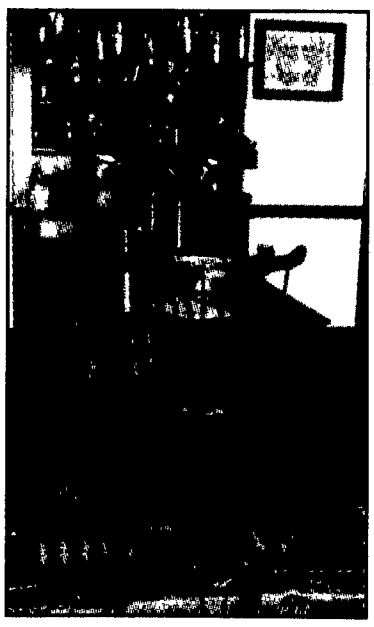
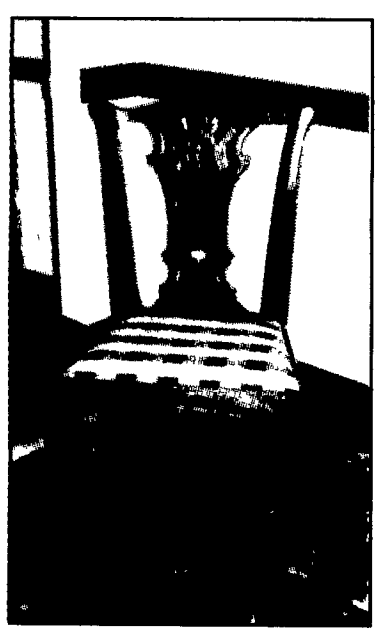
This Queen Anne highboy was made by a member of the Daniel Boone family.



These 18th century Windsor chairs surround a less formal country table.

This figured walnut chest was made in Berks County. The signature of the maker, the date, and for whom it was made is written on the bottom of the piece.



This formal chair, left, features Gothic splat carving. This trifled or three-toed transitional Queen Anne chair, right, was made around 1745.

Obsolete Dress Accessories Can Be Collectible

Here's proof that long out-of-fashion items that seem to have no practical use today can be reborn as collectibles.

Consider the chatelaine.

"The what?" you might ask.

Yet it and other men's and women's dress accessories from the 19th century are not only coming to auction and the internet but doing surprisingly well.

At a recent Skinner auction a chatelaine, silver-plated, sold for $345. On the internet, another chatelain sold for $750.

Chatelaines have been around for several hundred years, originally used for the very practical purpose of holding keys. It was worn at the waist. By the 19th century, made of sterling silver and silver-plate, it became a dress accessory. It was worn like a brooch or pin near the shoulder. It still retained a practical purpose with such items as vinaigrettes (small decorative bottles that held smelling salts) and small mirrors and even buttonhooks. These days vinaigrettes, made of various materials from tortoiseshell to glass and silver sell at auction for $300 and up to serious collectors.

Clues: Chatelaines and vinaigrettes are only two of the many forgotten but collectible dress accessory categories. Chatelette pins that attached to the lapel or to chatelaines came in sterling silver or silverplate. They were made in many designs and shapes. You can find them at antique shows for a few dollars, since most dealers don't know their purpose. Or, with luck, tucked away in drawers at house sales. You could start a new fashion by wearing several as pins.

Garter, suspender and arm band buckles can turn up at flea markets or attic trunks. Ladies garter buckles were quite fancy, considering no one was supposed to see them. They came in a variety of shapes, including heart. They were often set with fake gem settings and often of rolled gold or sterling silver. The garters themselves were often made of quality silk elastic webbing. The most attractive examples were decorated with bright colored ribbons.

When money was no object to the Victorian man, gold and sterling silver suspender buckles and buckles for arm bands were worn. Like the ladies' buckle mountings, these often had many different engraved motifs.

Veils were a popular fashion of the 19th century and to keep them in place were sterling silver and often gold veil fasteners. Collectors look for the most fanciful shapes such as butterflies, birds, and insects. Fake gem stones decorated many. The more common fasteners were oblong. There were also pins that came in sets to hold shawls and lace collars in place. The scarf pins, also known as stick pins, had tiny heads of various shapes, mounted on a pin shaft. Subjects included butterflies, birds, horseshoes, and flowers. Popular since it was first made was the pin with a teddy bear head. There were also cameo heads.

Even the humble belt buckle could be a work of art around the turn-of-the century. These were often decorated with a variety of fake gem stones.

When was the last time you saw anybody wearing a locket on a chain? They were the ultimate fashion in the late 19th century when they contained miniature paintings or pictures of family loved ones. They ranged in size from half an inch square to around 1½" in diameter or length. The locket covers were of silver-plate, silver and gold with engraved motifs and both precious and semi-precious stone trim.

Another forgotten name is the once popular lavaliere. These very delicate pendents on small chains were worn around the neck. Some consisted of several chains with pendents attached, festoon-style on many tiny chains.

Use your imagination. Frame them or wear them for a decorative statement.

Proposed Budget Continues Historic Commitment

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Gov. Tom Ridge's new state budget proposal continues his administration's historic commitment to Pennsylvania's environment, directing nearly $140 million to implement the third year of "Growing Greener" — Pennsylvania's largest-ever environmental investment.

Gov. Ridge also proposed $4.6 million for the first full year of "Growing Smarter." He also continued his call to lawmakers to address the impact of landfills on Pennsylvania communities.

"After 300 years, I am proud that we can still call Pennsylvania 'Penn's Woods,'" Gov. Ridge said. "I am committed to keeping it that way. We will under this budget. We're going to grow greener, smarter and cleaner than ever before."

Gov. Ridge's 2001-02 budget proposes $138.9 million to fulfill his commitment for the third year of the five-year, nearly $650 million "Growing Greener" initiative. The planned appropriation of $135 million has increased to nearly $140 million due to accrued interest. The $138.9 million is allocated to several state agencies:

• $20.6 million to the Department of Agriculture for farmland preservation;

• $51.9 million to the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) for watershed protection and restoration, including installing stream buffers, fencing streams, treating or eliminating acid mine drainage, plugging abandoned oil and gas wells, restoring wetlands, reclaiming abandoned mines, and funding watershed assessments;

• $33.5 million to the Department of Conservation and Natural Resources (DCNR) to make infrastructure improvements in Pennsylvania's world-class state parks and forests - including new bridges and roads, sewer and water systems, campground enhancements — and grants for community recreation and conservation initiatives such as trails, parks, playgrounds, open space, heritage tourism, and special species protection; and

• $32.9 to the Pennsylvania Infrastructure Investment Authority (PENNVEST) for water, sewer and storm-water projects.

"Pennsylvania is truly 'Growing Greener,' as our largest-ever investment in our environment makes all 67 counties greener for our children and their children," Gov. Ridge said. Ridge noted several advancements, such as:

• More than 36,000 acres of farmland preserved - a pace greater than any state in the nation;

• More than 4,000 acres of wetlands restored;

• $20 million in improvements to state parks and forests;

• Nearly $5 million for community recreation, open space and special species protection; and

• More than 5,000 acres of abandoned mine lands reclaimed.

Gov. Ridge noted in his budget address that Pennsylvania recently was rated the number one state in the nation for farmland preservation. The American Farmland Trust selected Gov. Ridge to receive the National Achievement Award for Pennsylvania's "remarkable accomplishments."

"Under Gov. Ridge's leadership, Pennsylvania has emerged as the number one state in farmland protection," said Ralph Grossi, president of American Farmland Trust. "Pennsylvania has responded to the challenge facing all of America — the conversion of high-quality farmland to other uses. It has increased its investment in farmland protection, developed new planning tools for local governments, and recognized the tremendous social, environmental and economic contributions that agriculture makes to our communities."

Since 1989, Pennsylvania has protected more than 1,500 farms, totaling more than 180,000 acres — more farms and more acres preserved than any state in the nation. And 67 percent of that farmland was protected during the Ridge Administration. Last year was a record-breaking year in farmland preservation for the Ridge Administration, with 33,270 acres and 311 farms preserved.

"Pennsylvania has some of the most productive farmland and the most beautiful vistas on earth," Gov. Ridge said. "That's why we've worked so hard to protect our precious farmland, open spaces and waterways - to save open space and preserve a quality of life, and a way of life — for our farm families, and for future generations of Pennsylvanians.

"Agriculture was Pennsylvania's first industry. And it continues to be our number one industry. And thanks to the hard work of state and county farmland-preservation boards, Pennsylvania is preserving farmland at a pace greater than any other state in the nation."

The budget also invests $4.6 million for the continuation and expansion of the "Growing Smarter" initiative — a nearly 30 percent or $1 million increase over last year.

"Sound land use will continue to be a priority for my administration," Gov. Ridge said. "We'll provide more help to local governments as they make decisions on how their communities will grow in the 21st century. We'll encourage effective local land-use planning, while still respecting private property rights."

In June 2000, Gov. Ridge signed two "Growing Smarter" land-use bills he called for to make the most dramatic changes in state land-use laws in more than 30 years. Gov. Ridge was cited as a national leader in addressing the "Growing Pains" of sprawl by a new publication from the National Governors' Association's Center for Best Practices. The $4.6 million in this year's budget will help to:

• Expand the Governor's Center for Local Government Services' sound land-use initiatives and respond to the recent amendments to the Municipalities Planning Code under "Growing Smarter";

• Further develop and strengthen planning capabilities at the county and multi-municipal level through technical assistance and land-use planning grants;

• Strengthen interagency communication and coordination; and develop an electronic clearinghouse for land-use resources.

The second annual report on land use from the Governor's Center for Local Government Services has been sent to Gov. Ridge and is available beginning today on the PA PowerPort, www.state.pa.us, or directly at www.dced.state.pa.us.

In his annual budget presentation to the General Assembly today, Gov. Ridge also called on the General Assembly to pass meaningful landfill legislation, saying that such legislation is a critical next step if Pennsylvania is to continue its dramatic environmental progress.

"Right now, Pennsylvania has more landfill space than we need — enough, in fact, for 11 years' worth of trash," Gov. Ridge said. "Yet the requests for new and larger landfills, mostly from out of state, keep piling up. One man's trash may be another man's treasure — but it's Pennsylvania's problem. We must work together to pass meaningful landfill legislation."

Gov. Ridge's 2001-02 budget also proposes $5 million for the continued removal and reuse of stockpiled waste tires, an increase of $1 million.

When Gov. Ridge signed the Waste Tire Recycling Act in 1996, there were 36 million tires in stockpiles throughout the Commonwealth. "Since then, we have cleaned up more than 20 million tires that had been eyesores and environmental problems for years," Gov. Ridge said. "This $5 million will help continue our good work to make Pennsylvania cleaner."

Other proposed 2001-02 environmental initiatives are:

$2.9 million to hire 30 full-time DCNR forest rangers and equipment to enhance public presence and enforcement efforts on 2.1 million acres of state forests; and

$1.5 million proposed under the Pennsylvania Forest Lands Beautification Program to continue funding to remove illegally deposited tires and other waste that mars state forest and park lands and creates environmental hazards.

Dave Unger, an employee at the Cherokee Plant of Merck and Co., Inc., was elected vice-chairman. Mary-Lou Rebuck, a dairy farmer in Washington Township, was voted as secretary-treasurer.

Other members include Stanley Crone, Danville, farmer-director; Leon Wertz, Danville, farmer-director; and Albert Mabus, Turbotville, public director. Commissioner Samuel S. Deitrick is the county commissioners' representative.

The Northumberland County Conservation District Board directs a staff who administer the conservation programs in Northumberland County on behalf of the county and the commonwealth. Members of the district staff include Dennis DiOrio, Jr., district manager; George J. Phillips, Chesapeake Bay technician; David F. USDA Announces New Equipment, Utensil Inspection, Certification Program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA announced that the Agricultural Marketing Service has developed a voluntary, user-fee-funded program under the authority of the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946 to inspect and certify equipment and utensils used to process livestock and poultry products.

"Under this new program, livestock and poultry processing equipment and utensils inspected and certified by AMS to voluntary consensus standards for sanitary design will provide a third party assurance that they meet minimum requirements for cleanability, suitability of materials used in construction, durability, and inspectability," said AMS Administrator Kathleen Merrigan.

Committee on Food Processing Equipment. These standards establish minimum hygienic design requirements for equipment to be eligible to be certified under the program and carry the marketing claim of "United States Department of Agriculture Accepted Equipment."

Persons interested in learning more about this new program, or equipment and utensil manufacturers interested in having their products inspected and certified under the new program, may request service at one of the following addresses:

1 FARM EQUIPMENT

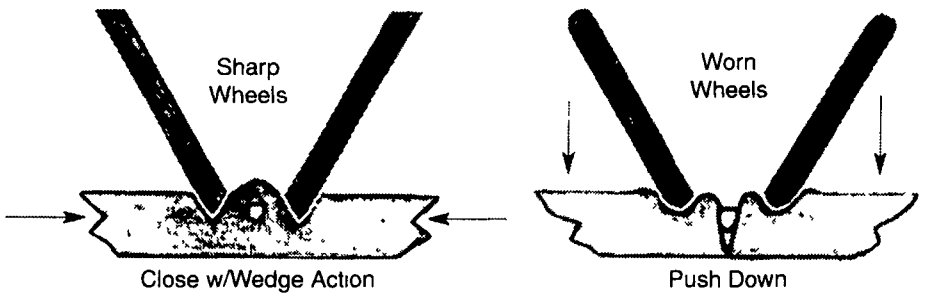
Attention:

Kinze/John Deere Planter & No-Till Drill Owners

Did you know that those old cast iron closing wheels can be reconditioned to "like-new" performance for a fraction of replacement cost?

Now is the time to get ready for tough planting conditions like sod and dry, hard soil. We can help your older planter or drill to close those seed trenches properly. (See illustration)



After all, if a field is worth planting, why not do it right?

Benefits include:

- ✔ Less closing pressure
- ✔ More uniform germination
- ✔ Improved stand population
- ✔ Increased yields

State Task Force Eyes Asian Longhorned Beetle

WOOSTER, Ohio — Ohio State University researchers are joining forces with forestry and agriculture professionals to make sure an invasive insect that is destroying trees in New York and Illinois urban areas stays out of Ohio.

The Asian longhorned beetle (ALB), also known as the Asian cerambycid beetle, was first discovered infesting New York City trees in 1996 and has since found its way to Chicago. To date, more than 6,500 trees found to be infested with the beetle have been destroyed. Because the beetle is difficult to detect and control, any tree found to be infested is immediately destroyed and the area is quarantined.

Concerns that the beetle may find its way to Ohio has prompted the organization of the Ohio ALB Task Force. Made up of OSU researchers and professionals in the Ohio Department of Natural Resources Division of Forestry, Ohio Department of Agriculture and the USDA, the purpose of the group is to survey state trees and educate green industry professionals about the beetle and how to detect its presence.

"We are taking an educational approach to helping people recognize the Asian longhorned beetle and how to detect for early signs or symptoms," said Dan Herms, OSU Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center entomologist.

The Asian longhorned beetle, a native of Japan, Korea and southern China, is believed to have made its way to U.S. ports of entry via wooden packing crates. Though only found infesting trees in Chicago and New York City, live and dead beetles have been found in warehouses in Cincinnati, Ohio, and other states including Texas, California, Florida, and Indiana.

Dan Balser of ODNR Division of Forestry said the key to stopping the beetles' spread is early detection. "The Asian longhorned beetle was probably infesting trees in New York for seven to 10 years before it was discovered," he said. "We have to move fast to eradicate the beetle and to do that requires tree surveys via binoculars, climbing and the bucket truck,"

The beetle's success in destroying trees lies in its voracious appetite for a wide variety of tree species and its unique life cycle. Maple trees of all types appear to be its favorite host, but the beetle will also attack horsechestnut, poplar, willow, elm, mulberry, alder, birch, and black locust.

Unlike other invasive insects, the Asian longhorned beetle will attack a healthy tree of any size and spends nearly all of its one-year life cycle within the tree, making detection difficult. Adults are present from June to October, laying eggs in round pits in the bark where larvae hatch and begin tunneling their way into the wood. The larvae pupate and then become adults, which bore a 3/8-inch hole through the tree to emerge and begin the cycle again.

"Over time, two to three years, the tree, which becomes riddled with holes, can no longer move water from the roots and it eventually dies," said Balser. Signs that hint of a beetle attack include the presence of the beetle itself, round pits in the bark, oozing sap from branches, accumulation of sawdust at the base of the tree or within branch crotches and 3/8-inch exit holes in the bark.

Balser said it's also important to know what the beetle looks like. Shiny black with white spots on its back, antennae and legs, the Asian longhorned beetle looks similar to other insects such as the cottonwood borer and the white-spotted sawyer.

Currently there are no effective trapping methods (the beetles don't respond to pheromone or light traps) and no natural predators exist to control the insect. Only one insecticide, imidacloprid, appears to protect non-infested trees through soil and trunk injections. Such injections, however, have no affect on beetle larvae already established in trees. Once a tree becomes infested, the only method of control is to cut the tree down, chip it and burn the chips.

Herms said that although no research is currently being conducted at Ohio State on the Asian longhorned beetle, he and other scientists are doing their part to educate the public through green industry presentations and materials distributed at county Extension offices.

Statewide surveys in potentially high-risk areas are currently being conducted. Completely surveys in Columbus in 1999 and in Ashland and Vandalia last year found no Asian longhorned beetle infestations. Areas in Cincinnati, Cleveland and Youngstown will be surveyed this year. Dave Nielsen, an OARDC entomologist, is also keeping his eyes open for any signs of infestations at local parks in Wooster while he conducts surveys of the gypsy moth, another invasive insect that has already found a home in Ohio.

Governor To Receive Top Conservation Award

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Ridge has been chosen to receive the Conservationist of the Year Award by the Pennsylvania Wildlife Federation and the Pennsylvania Audubon Society at the annual conservation award banquet April 24.

The award recognizes an outstanding Pennsylvanian whose efforts have contributed greatly to preserving and enhancing the commonwealth's environment and natural resources.

Ridge is being honored for the Growing Greener initiative the past year, which resulted in 568 watershed restoration projects, restoring more than 4,000 acres of wetlands and reclaiming more than 5,000 acres of abandoned mine lands.

In addition, he is being recognized for the many environmental accomplishments of his administration, such as the award-winning land recycling program, which to date has cleaned up about 800 old industrial sites, adding 20,000 new jobs; signing the 2000 Agreement to protect the Chesapeake Bay; his leadership role in the Great Lakes Protection Fund and the Sea Grant programs; and forming the Green Government Council, promoting the use of environmentally safe forms of energy, "green ways," and "green architecture."

The 17th annual awards banquet will be at the Sheraton Harrisburg East April 24. For more information and tickets, call (717) 213-6880.

Rooster.com Names V.P. Of Marketing

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Tanna Moore has been named vice president of marketing for Rooster.com, responsible for the marketing and business development activities for agriculture's leading e-business network.

"Tanna's experience in technology marketing and business development will help us as we continue to solidify Rooster.com as the premier Internet site for the agricultural community," said Gary Carlson, president and chief executive officer of Rooster.com. "Her diverse background in working with consumer and technology-based businesses will be a significant asset to the Rooster.com team."

Moore will be responsible for developing and executing core strategies that guide Rooster-.com's marketing and business development programs.

Moore's business marketing experience spans more than 20 years, and includes building and implementing marketing plans in the consumer package goods industry, plus strategy, marketing development and general management roles in technology software and service organizations.

Syngenta Seeds Announces Flexible Seed Finance Options

GOLDEN VALLEY, Minn. — Syngenta Seeds announces a wider range of flexible financing and payment options for qualified customers in 2001.

These programs, supported by NK Brand seed pricing that remains virtually unchanged, demonstrate the company's commitment to helping its farmer-customers meet current economic pressures.

"Our financing packages are another part of our portfolio approach to customer service," said Jack Bernens, vice president of marketing. "Just as we work to customize seed selection to meet each farmer's individual agronomic and marketing needs, we also work to provide flexible financing programs to fit their management needs."

The company's financing options allow customers to lock in seed early and schedule payments to fit their needs. Several plans provide cash flow flexibility by deferring payments until after harvest, and one of the company's most popular options — the AgriFit Plan™ — allows customers to finance both their seed purchases and selected Syngenta Crop Protection pest control products at up to 3½ percent below the prime interest rate.

"We understand the tremendous challenges our customers face given the present farm economy," Bernens said, "Offering joint financing packages for both seed and crop protection products gives our customers the opportunity to purchase both inputs on the same favorable extended terms."

Third-Party Research Finds Soybeans Offer Higher Yields

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — For the second year in a row, Monsanto Corporation's Asgrow brand Roundup Ready soybean varieties outyielded Pioneer brand soybean varieties in independent research.

PSL Genetics of Tipton, Ind., found that Asgrow brand Roundup Ready varieties averaged 2.2 bushels per acre higher yield in 2000 and 1.7 bushels per acre higher yield in 1999 than Pioneer brand Roundup Ready soybean varieties.

PSL Genetics also found Asgrow brand Roundup Ready soybean varieties outyielded Pioneer brand conventional varieties by an average of 2.9 bushels per acre in 2000 and an average of 2.3 bushels per acre in 1999.

"Third-party research confirms that Asgrow brand elite soybean varieties continue to offer higher yields than competitive brands," said Monsanto market manager Rob Hannam. Asgrow brand germplasm is the top choice of Roundup Ready soybean growers because it offers the highest profit potential.

"When researchers add in the impact of weeds, they often see a yield advantage for the Roundup Ready soybean system due to its superior weed control and improved crop safety. The PSL yield data confirms the value of using Asgrow brand seed as part of the Roundup Ready weed control system."

PSL Genetics collected data from 29 locations in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Wisconsin in 2000 and 25 locations in Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio in 1999.

To maintain the trials under weed-free conditions, researchers applied Roundup Ultra herbicides on the Roundup Ready soybeans and used standard herbicides on the conventional soybeans based on local recommendations and technical fit.

Proper Precautions Key To Lifting, Climbing On The Farm

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Lifting and climbing are activities people do every day without thinking, but a farm safety expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences said children should be taught proper techniques for lifts and climbs.

Farmers can assign appropriate farm tasks to their children using the newly developed North American Guidelines to Children's Agricultural Tasks (NAGCAT), said Dennis Murphy, professor of agricultural engineering.

"Just one improper lift can lead to long-term back pain or other injuries," Murphy said. "A misstep on a ladder or in a barn can cause serious injury or death, so children should be trained in safety for even the simplest of jobs."

Lifting

Murphy said parents should ensure that objects to be lifted weigh no more than 15 percent of the child's body weight and that the child should carry the object no more than 15 yards.

Murphy offers the following rules for safe lifting:

- Stand close to the object and spread feet wide to straddle the object.
- Bend your knees and hips to lift, keeping head up and back straight.
- Hold in stomach muscles, while lifting with the leg muscles.
- Keep the load close to the body, using a good grip.
- Turn the feet, not the back, in the direction you want to go.

Murphy recommends using carts or levers to help move heavy objects. "Never lift heavy objects above chest height," Murphy warned. "Remember that bulky objects are harder to balance and carry.

Climbing

The most important part of climbing safety is making sure children are comfortable on ladders and with heights. "Parents should make sure a child can balance, lift, turn and stretch on a two-step ladder," Murphy said. "Children with poor balance and coordination are more likely to fall."

When climbing, children should wear gloves and non-skid shoes. In addition, the ladder should be the right size, weighing no more than 15 percent of the child's body weight. "Make sure the ladder is free of damage and that the climbing area is stable and safe," Murphy said. Murphy said every potential climber should follow these steps:

- Check that the ladder is firmly set.
- Grasp alternate rungs and take first step.
- Keep feet and hips within sides of ladder frame when climbing.
- Maintain three contact points at all times when climbing (example: two hands and one foot on the ladder).
- Keep the head up and back straight, and do not climb beyond the third rung from the top.

Penn State offers a free publication, "Children and Safety on the Farm," that shows parents and others how to make farms safer for children. Single copies are available free of charge by contacting your county Penn State Cooperative Extension office, or by calling the College of Agricultural Sciences Publications Distribution Center at (814) 865-6713.

U. Of Md. Ice Cream Course Prepares Frozen Dairy Products Entrepreneurs

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Small-scale ice cream manufacturers and individuals considering ice cream manufacturing as a business should register now for the University of Maryland's renowned Ice Cream Course here March 17-20.

Organized by Dr. Scott Rankin, dairy processing specialist with the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources' Maryland Cooperative Extension, this educational opportunity is designed to provide operators of batch freezers (and those interested in operating them) with in-depth exposure to the business of manufacturing quality frozen desserts.

"We offer the most intensive, hands-on ice cream in the United States," said Rankin, "and our students appreciate that. As one of last year's participants commented, "You can read the texts and take correspondence courses, but until you get hands-on experience, you can't say you know how to make ice cream. I can now say I know how to make ice cream. I give this course five scoops out of five."

Due to its emphasis on hands-on experience, the course is limited to 24 people. In addition to lectures focusing on fundamental concerns of quality evaluation, flavor selection, and processing procedures, these individuals will attend manufacturing sessions held in the university's $14 million, state-of-the-art dairy processing plant.

Working in teams of three under skilled supervision, they will produce and evaluate dozens of different products, emphasizing premium ice creams, sherbets, and sorbets. And at the end of each lab session, they will taste and evaluate products produced the previous day.

Registration deadline is March 1. But because last year's course sold out, interested individuals are encouraged to register early to avoid being relegated to the waiting list. A fee of $850 includes tuition, lab fees, course materials, break refreshments, a dinner banquet, and a certificate of participation.

For more information or a course brochure, call Dr. Scott Rankin at (301) 405-4568, send an e-mail message (rankins@wam.umd.edu), check out the course Website at http://ansc.umd.edu/dairyfoods/ICSC1.htm.

Silage Spreaders with a Heritage of Quality

Lancaster Level-Flo has been the leader in non-motorized silage spreaders for more than 25 years. Each spreader is specifically designed to meet the needs of the individual operator.

Choose the spreader that best matches the equipment you use to fill your silo.

The Model 1030 Multi-Flo® is our standard silage spreader. With a 9" gooseneck, it is designed for average capacity blowers and silo sizes.

The Model 1200 Multi-Flo® has a 12" wide gooseneck. Its larger size all but eliminates plugging problems, even when you blow in haylage. It is especially helpful in larger silos.

The BlueMax® is built for those who push high-capacity silo filling equipment to the limit. All parts of the BlueMax® subject to wear are made 25% heavier - and the stainless steel plate is twice as heavy. For strength, there are reinforcements all around. Even our well-known non-binding hinge is heavier.

For more information or the location of the Lancaster dealer nearest you, call today 1-800-635-8708.

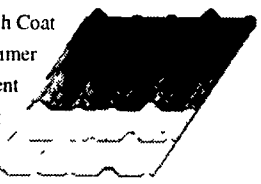
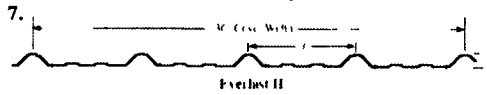
5. Full Hard Steel (80,000 min yield)


6. Heat formed, less paint cracks
7.


Everlast II
NOTE! It is more important what is under the paint than what you see on top!
1 One of the best paints, superior acid rain, cracking resistance and color retention
2 Primer coat promotes outstanding top coat adhesion
3 Zinc phosphate pretreatment This is a very important process - if your current supplier cannot supply you with this or does not know, you should reconsider
4 G-100 Galvanized Most metal roofing has approx 40% less galvanized under the paint G-100 is more galvanized than most unpainted panels
5 Full Hard Anything less than full hard will bend easier, lower snow loads, etc
6 Heat formed Metal is painted before ribs are formed Most paint cracks at bends, heat forming greatly reduces cracks (check metal siding that is installed for 5-10 years)
